PREFACE.

THE preparation of this little book has not been without much solicitude on our part in the desire we have felt to produce a work as perfect as possible in all its details. How far we have succeeded we leave our patrons to judge.

Although we do not expect the book will be found free from errors, yet, if after a thorough and impartial examination it receives the approval of those who gave encouragement by their patronage, we shall feel amply repaid for our exertions to make it worthy of their commendation.

All who aided our undertaking in their efforts to furnish subject matter for the pages of this book, and by their patronage or otherwise, we tender our sincere thanks and good wishes.

McLEAN COUNTY GAZETTEER,

ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY BY TOWNSHIPS, GIVING AN ACCOUNT OF THEIR LOCATION, POPULATION, SOIL, PRODUCTIONS, TIMBER, AND WATER-COURSES, WITH ITEMS OF EARLY HISTORY, THE MANUFACTURES, TRADE AND GENERAL BUSINESS STATISTICS OF THE TOWNS, VILLAGES AND SETTLEMENTS, TOGETHER WITH A CONCISE HISTORY OF THE PART TAKEN IN THE WAR FOR THE UNION BY MANY OF THE COMPANIES AND REGIMENTS RAISED IN THIS COUNTY.

McLEAN COUNTY.

The rapidity with which the Western States have been settled is unsurpassed almost in the history of the world. Where, but a short time since, the Savage unmolested pursued his game over those beautiful and wide spread prairies and nought but wildness reigned around, now the school house and spire rise majestically, indicating a high state of civilization. No later than 1821, no white man had built his cabin within the limits of McLean County. The wild Indian roamed as the undisputed possessor of the soil. But in the following year, 1822, the long silence that had pervaded these wilds for past centuries, was broken by John Hendricks and John Dawson, who settled in the South-east part of Blooming Grove. William and Thomas Orendoff, Ebenezer and John Roods and John Benson came into the county the following year, 1823, and settled near by them. In 1824, William H. Hodges, John Brock, Milton Stringfield, William Walter and James Latta were added to the settlement. Randolph's Grove was settled first in 1825 by James Burleson, Gardner Randolph, the widow Stringfield, and Absalom, Isaac, and Jesse Funk—John Dawson removed from Blooming Grove and settled in Old Town in 1826. The first settlement was made in Twin Grove by Matthew Harland, in 1826. The following year Stouts Grove was settled by Ephraim Stout, the McClures, E. Robb and the Rev. M. Mitchell.

The first house was erected within the present limits of the city of Bloomington, in the fall of 1825, by William Evans, on the lot now occupied by D. Wilkins. In 1828 William Evans, who is now living on Grove street, erected a house of poles, fourteen feet square, and cultivated a few acres of land. In the fall of 1829, about twenty families were settled about the Grove, cultivating a few acres of land. In October of this year the lands were thrown into market, and Mr. James Allin, who was selling goods near by what is called the Walker School House, purchased of Government the land upon which the city of Bloomington is situated, and erected a house and store upon the beautiful lot now owned and occupied by Dr. Stipp.

The County was organized in January, 1831, from parts of Livingston, Woodford and DeWitt counties. It was named after Hon. John McLean, of Shawneetown. The county seat was located in Bloomington in April of the same year. The first court was held by Judge Lockwood in 1832, in Mr. Allin's house. A Grand Jury was empanneled, but the morals of the inhabitants were so good that they had no business. "The people," in the language of one of these settlers, "were, for a new country, persevering, industrous, and very moral." In the spring of 1832, the Sioux war was raging, and many were frightened and left, but returned again soon. General Covell and General Gridley came into the county in 1831. The first sale of lots in the city was on the 4th of July of this same year. Fifty-four lots were sold at an average price of $20.00.

For a number of years the fire swept over the prairies, and the settlers with much difficulty preserved their houses from the devouring element. Judge Davis, James Miller and Dr. Henry came into the county in 1835. The population of the county in 1834 was 200; in 1836, 500. The growth of the county met with an entire check in 1840, and continued till 1844–45. Business men were generally broken up all over the county. There was a general suspension of Banks in the State. A gradual improvement commenced and continued until 1850, when the population was about 800.

SCHOOLS.

The first school house in the county was built of logs, in 1825. about half a mile northwest of what is called the Walker School House- William H. Hodge was the first teacher. In 1830 the first school house was erected in the city limits, on the west of Main street, just south of Grove street, where the old candle factory stood. Rev. Mr. Latta and Mr. Hodge hewed the logs of which it was built. The school was commenced by Mr. Hodge, (he walking from his farm about two miles from town), and continued by A. C. Washburn, so well known to the citizens of Bloomington. The old settlers gave Mr. Washburn the name of being an excellent teacher. If he was as faithful in teaching as he is in his business, the young entrusted to his charge were well cared for. Miss Charlotte Wheeler taught a few scholars in her father's house, situated near where Mr. Adolph now resides, on the corner of Madison and Grove streets. John Greenman built a house near the Episcopal Church, in which he and his daughter, Lydia Greenman, taught in 1831. In 1835, Rev. Mr. Foster built the Seminary building, now owned by D. Wilkins, in which he taught, assisted by his sister-in-law, Miss Cowdry, for a number of years. Subsequently Mr. Manier, Dr. Finley, and D. Wilkins taught in the same building. Dr. Hobbs, an excellent teacher and man, known to many who now reside in the city, taught four years in the old candle factory. He was a friend to the poor and suffering, and many were the noble acts of kindness he conferred upon them.

The board of Trustees of the Wesleyan University, were organized in 1849. The Institution commenced its first session in the old church, (now Catholic), it was soon removed to the basement of the brick church. Prof. Reuben Andrus was Principal, assisted by Prof. William Goodfellow. This Institution is now under the direction of the Illinois and Central Illinois Conferences of the M. E. Church. It has struggled hard and long for an existence, and under the Presidency of O. S. Munsell, assisted by other sacrificing teachers, and the efforts of C. W. C. Munsell, the efficient Agent, the institution has surmounted every obstacle, and is now entirely free from debt, and in a very prosperous condition. The number of students in attendance the present term, is nearly three hundred. Its dark days have passed; and under the charge of its present able Faculty, it must be successful, and take as high a stand as any similar institution in the West.

The first Educational Convention of Teachers in the State was held in the M. E. Church of Bloomington, commencing Dec. 26, 1853, continuing three days. The following subjects were discussed: 1st. The necessity of a State Teachers' Institute. 2d. The necessity of having a State Superintendent. 3d. The establishment of a teachers' paper. 4th. The establishment of a State Normal School. At this Convention the State Teachers' Association was organized. First officers—President, Wm. Goodfellow, Bloomington; Vice President, M. H. Spaulding, Jacksonville; Thomas Powell, Mt. Palatine, and C. C. Ponney, Peoria; Secretary, D. Wilkins; Treasurer, O. W. Sears; Corresponding Secretary, H. O. Snow, Peoria.

Through the untiring energy of the Teachers of Illinois, in less than four years they had their Association, State Superintendent, paper, and Normal University. The Bloomington Female College, built by the munificent donation of Mr. Major, at an expense of $20,000, was built in 1857. It has prospered finely—a part of the time under the patronage of the Presbyterian Church, and part of the time under the Christian denomination. It is in a prosperous condition. The Bloomington Female Seminary, under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Conover, has been in existence about the same time, and is very popular. The number of Free Schools in the county at the present time, 1866, is 220. No. of Districts, 215. No. of scholars, 10,337. No. male teachers, 115; female, 222; in all, 337. Principal of Township Fund, $88,834; received from Special District Tax, $42,545.53. Amount received for all school purposes, $57,404. Amount paid for Teachers' wages, $41,592. Amount expended for School purposes, 52,009. The Bill for establishing the State Normal University passed the Legislature and was approved by the Governor February 18, 1857. On tne following May it was located at Normal—the bid of McLean County being $141,000, this being greater than any other place. It was opened in Major's Block, in Bloomington, until the present edifice was erected when it was removed and formally opened. This institution, from the commencement, has been growing in favor and increasing in popularity with the people of the State, until now, under the Principalship of Richard Edwards, and his able corps of teachers, it stands second to none in the country. The building is the most ample and beautiful of any Normal building in the Union. It is situated near the junction of the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis, and the Illinois Central railroads, on a beautiful rolling prairie.

The number in attendance the present term is about seven hundred. The influence this institution has upon the schools of our noble State, can never be told.

CHURCHES.

In 1829, the Rev. Mr. Tarkinton—a circuit preacher—preached the first sermon in the county. James Latta, Stephen A. Beggs, Rev. M. Cressey, Rev. Wm. Rogel, followed. The first church was built in 1834-35, under the administration of Zaddock Hall, on the corner of Main and Grove streets. Jesse Walker, Methodist, who lived near Plainfield, in DuPage County, preached in Mr. Allin's house the first sermon in the city, in 1830. Lemuel Foster, Presbyterian, preached first in 1835; Rev. Mr. Watson and Mr. Spencer, followed him. There are now upwards of thirty churches in the county, and the population is forty thousand.

AGRICULTURE.

There is no county in the State where the farmer is better rewarded for his toil. Our farmers are generally out of debt and wealthy. Some of the heaviest stockholders in the West are residents of this county. Corn, wheat, oats, barley and potatoes, are the staple crops. Corn never fails, grass grows finely, apples, peaches, pears, and grapes, are generally abundant.

POLITICAL.

In this county, the Republican party was first organized when they nominated the gallant Bissell for Governor. In this convention the noble, the honest and patriotic Lincoln made one of his most eloquent speeches for freedom.

In this county, also, the first State Loyal League was organized, which fought the greatest battle for human rights, that was ever fought on earth at the polls. Thus I have given you a short history of this county. The facts speak for themselves, and her glory is in her own record. Who would not be proud of such a county?

Arrowsmith Township

Is situated in the second tier of townships from the south, and the second from the eastern boundary of the county. There is very little timber. It is watered by Sangamon Creek flowing through the centre of the township. There is one church (Methodist) in the township, and three schools. Corn is the staple production, though the soil is adapted to all the cereals grown in this climate. Population 636.

Senex is a post office in Arrowsmith Township, 20 miles from Bloomington, on the stage route from Bloomington to Saybrook.

Belle Flower Township

Occupies the southeastern corner of the county. It is almost entirely a prairie country, there being but little timber in the township. It is watered by the east fork of Salt Creek. There are four schools, and the school fund is said to be the best in the county. The soil is as good as the average through the county. No post office. Population 259.

Bloomington,

A flourishing city, and the seat of justice for McLean County, is pleasantly situated on the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis Railroad, one mile and a half south of its junction with the Illinois Central, and 125 miles southwest from Chicago. It is beautifully located on the border of Blooming Grove, on a high rolling site, and elegantly laid out. The surrounding country is rich in groves of trees, fine residences and farms, with a rich and fertile soil, adapted to the production of everything conducive to the wants or even the luxuries of life.

HISTORY.—Scarcely thirty years ago the spot on which the city now stands, was a wild unbroken prairie. The natural advantages of the country, prominent among them, the remarkable fertility and productiveness of the soil as well as the healthfulness of the climate, and the surpassing beauty of the situation, had begun to attract a few passing settlers as early as 1824, when the following named gentlemen, long since deceased, located upon the land where the city now stands, viz: John Hendricks, John Dawson, and William Goodheart. In this same year came William H. Hodge, still a resident of the city, who made a claim of lands, and erected a small log house, the first erected within the present corporate limits of the place. At that time, however, there was nothing which could properly be called a settlement in the neighborhood, and none indeed of any consequence nearer than 30 miles distant, where there was then a small colony of eleven families—a few houses at Chicago, and about an equal number at Peoria, constituting the nearest settled points of any size. Messrs. Rood, Walker, Benson, and William Evans, came to the place at various times within the next few years.

In 1829, James Allin, sen., came into this part of the country, and with him a new spirit of enterprise and industry, which had an immediate and happy influence upon the rising fortunes of the little community. Mr. Allin became the purchaser of the Government, of all the lands now embraced in and surrounding the present limits of the city. At the session of the Illinois Legislature of 1830, and '31, he succeeded in getting a bill passed for the organization of the then new county of McLean, with such boundaries as to make this spot the most feasible for the county seat. The county was formed by a division of Tazewell County, and the settlement of the boundaries between it and McLean, became a fruitful subject for dispute and agitation among the early settlers of the country. Local elections frequeutly turned upon it, and it was for a long time a question of absorbing interest to the citizens of Bloomington. From the scattered nature of the early population, the old county limits were necessarily very large, and subsequent division becoming necessary gave rise to a great deal of anxiety and very earnest efforts upon the part of many citizens with reference to retaining Bloomington as the county seat. It is said that the principal inducement presented in the circulation of the first petition, praying for the proposed separation, was the shorter distance to court, a matter of no slight importance in those days, when, owing to the want of sufficient accommodation, whole families frequently "camped out" in their wagons during their stay, bringing their own provisions and cooking apparatus with them. Mr. Allin brought to the place a small stock of goods, and opened the first store kept in the place, in a small log house which he also occupied as a dwelling. Part of it is still standing as part of the residence of Dr. Stipp. In this same house, and separated only by a thin partition from the family and domestic arrangements of Mr. Allin, the first courts were held, his honor Judge Lockwood, presiding, and afterwards in a small frame building erected on the public square for that purpose, until 1836, when the present brick Court House was erected at a cost of $8,500. The Court House since that time has undergone frequent repairs, making the cost much above those figures, and adding considerably to the appearance of the building. Besides those already named, Messrs. Demmett, Larrison, Baker, Gridley, (1831,) McKisson, Covell, Rev. James Latta, (1830,) John and W. S. Moore, Solomon Dodge, Dr. John Anderson, and K. H. and Jesse Fell, (1832,) may be regarded as the first settlers of Bloomington.

The following, which we cut from the files of the Bloomington Pantagraph, will serve to show that they are still held in grateful remembrance by their fellow citizens, for whose interests and that of their children, they toiled faithfully and endured patiently the privations of a new country.

"Our Oldest Settlers.—The most striking and affecting feature of the Pioneer's dinner was the presence of James Allin, sen., and William Evans. Both of these gentlemen are old and feeble. Mr. Evans is nearly blind, and was almost carried to his seat by two men. He was a farmer in city in early times, having raised corn and other grain in the eastern part of town. His present residence is near what was the Red Lion Hotel, so humorously described by Governor Moore.

"Colonel Gridley stated in his remarks that at the time of the Deep Snow, Mr. Evans was not considered a resident of Bloomington, being rather out of town. The city limits extended one-third of a mile east of his house, and nearly all the space is built up with houses. Mr. Evans' residence is on the south side of Grove Street, about half way from Main Street to the Central Depot.

"Mr. Allin's health is poor, and he has never recovered from a fall on the ice which severely injured him about three years ago. He walks on crutches, and was assisted up stairs by two men. He was complimented by the speakers as the man whose superior foresight pointed out Bloomington as the site of a future city, when all around was an uncultivated wilderness. According to what Gov. Moore and Col. Gridley said, Mr. Allin in his younger days, was very much such a man as we occasionally hear of now in frontier places.

"He used every honorable endeavor to induce emigrants to locate in this county. If they wished to settle in the new town, Mr. Allin would sell them lots at a low price, if they had money, and would sell it at a lower figure if they had little money, or would give lots outright if they had no money, always stipulating that improvements should be made. It was such unremitting care and exertions, which, in the course of a few years, gave this settlement a start that made it out of the question for any neighboring town to compete with it, and made it eventually a point to be aimed at by railroads, which have now made Bloomington one of the thriftiest and best business places in the State.

"It must have been a proud day to Mr. Allin to meet so many old friends and neighbors, not one of whom bears the slightest grudge against him, and to listen to such eloquent and appreciate tributes to his life long public spirit. With all his opportunities for building up a large fortune, Mr. Allin's valuable lands slipped from his hold in one way and another, to parties who could not or would not pay much for their lots, and to parties who afterwards speculated upon the rise of town lots, until when property came to be really valuable he had little left to sell. He however, acquired a comfortable competency, so that his old age is pleasantly passing in the midst of the community he took such pride in drawing together. A more grasping man would have so hesitated to sell property that settlers would have been driven away, and a less honorable man if he had made more money, would have had fewer friends in his old age.

"Bloomington owes a debt to Mr. Allin which it can never repay. Others of the old settlers are doubtless deserving of honorable mention, but we are not well enough posted to do them justice, and shall be glad to hear from those who can give us the requisite information."

Mr. Allin relates that he was decided upon locating upon the section now known as Bloomington, by observing that it appeared to be upon the natural lines of communication connecting important centres of trade, cutting a common hazel switch to serve as dividers, (we give nearly his own language,) he opened his map, and placing the twig so as to pass in a direct line from St. Lous to Chicago, found it to pass also through Blooming Grove, repeating the experiment with other great centres, he met with the same result, and still further trials leading to the same conclusion that this point was one destined to be an important railroad centre, from this apparently trivial incident his resolve was taken, to attempt the work of developing the wonderful resources of the country, with what surprising success may be seen.

The first store as already mentioned, was commenced by James Allin, sen., in 1830, near the corner of the present East and Grove Streets. Up to 1840 there were not more than six small stores in the place. At the present time Bloomington can boast of as many fine brick store houses and enterprising merchants as any city of like size in the United States. Messrs. Gridley, Covell and Hains, were among the earliest and most prominent merchants. Dr. John Anderson occupied an honorable position among the members of the medical profession. He was the first practising physician in the place, as early as 1832. He was followed soon after by Dr. Haines, and a partnership was soon formed between them.

The first brick building in the town was probably erected by James Allin, sen., in 1839, at the corner of Centre and Front Streets. Now they are scattered over the whole city, and many of them both private residences and blocks of stores would do credit to cities of a larger growth. The first steam saw mill in Bloomington was erected by Mr. Chase, of Cincinnati, in 1836. It was at least two years afterward before a flouring mill was built in the neighborhood of Wesleyville, and soon after another, owned by Mr. Covell. The history of early mill building in the country was attended by some amusing incidents. One of the first objects in the place which attracted the eye of the traveler in those days, was a huge frame on the outskirts of the village, built of timber, and having long arms stretching into the air, without any ostensible purpose. It was known popularly as "Gridley's Chapel," being the property of that gentleman, and was originally intended for a wind-mill, but all attempts to turn it to any use seemed destined to failure. After several useless efforts had been made to induce it to "fulfil the end of its being," as a windmill of good antecedents should have done, a party of the more roguishly inclined took advantage of a high gale of wind to set it going, and watch the results. The arms moved at first slowly and majestically in the breeze, but their motion gradually becoming accelerated until it culminated in an insane whirl of machinery, and the body politic being already somewhat crazy and unstable from long exposure, one portion soon parted company with the rest, and flew to a fabulous distance, being succeeded in its turn by another, until the whole structure, to use a Yankee expression, "went to eternal smash," and thus ended the history of windmills in this part of the country.

Many attempts were made to erect flouring mills, long before the first was built, and many hundreds of bushels of grain donated, after the primitive fashion of the times, to hold out inducements for some enterprising man to engage in the undertaking, but without success. One ingenious citizen at last supposed that he had invented a cheap power which could be applied to such purposes, and which he declared was destined to supersede steam, water and all other power heretofore discovered, or to be discovered in the future. He resisted stoutly any solicitation to make known his cherished secret, but proceeded with his plans in silence, with the purpose of forever silencing all objectors, and vindicating the superiority of his invention over all others, by a grand exhibition of the machinery in complete running order. On the day appointed a considerable and curious crowd assembled to await the result. It should be premised that the inventor had previously been running a horse or "ox mill," something upon the plan of an ordinary tread mill, and it was soon found that he intended to supersede the live stock by a wagon placed upon wheels and heavily loaded with stone, the revolution of the wheels to give the necessary impetus to the machinery. All was hushed expectation until the order was given in stentorian tones, "John cut the rope!" The rope was accordingly cut, but instead of the busy hum of machinery, only dead silence saluted the ears of the anxious spectators. The wheels, in defiance of logic which proved to a "demonstration" that they would circulate, refused to move. In a word, "the thing wouldn't go," and the hopes of the citizens of Bloomington were once more doomed to disappointment, much to the disgust of the illustrious inventor and with much laughter of the unbelievers.

The first public house in the place was kept by a Mr. Kimler. Richard Edwards, Jarvis Gaylord, and the ubiquitous John Smith were successively among the pioneers of the "tavern keeping," and their establishment was dignified by the name of the Prairie House.

The winter of 1830–31, was remarkable for an extraordinarily deep fall of snow blocking up the roads, and making travel almost impossible; considerable privation, and, in some cases, even actual distress were occasioned by it, and a lively impression seems to have been left upon the minds of the early settlers, which has made the winter of the "Deep Snow" an epoch in the early history of the place, to which all dates are referred, and which furnishes reliable data for all the weather-wise information of the "oldest inhabitant."

The year of 1831 was one of considerable depression and embarrassment, especially among the farming community; scarcely sufficient being raised for the support of the popupulation, but from that time matters began to mend, and a steady and encouraging growth succeeded.

From 1836 to 1842 was another period of marked depression. Owing to the involved condition of the State finances and other discouraging circumstances, but few inducements were held out to immigration, and comparatively few improvements were made. Since then, however, the progress of the place has been constant, and increased wealth and prosperity in all things, have been the rule.

The Indian war which broke out in 1832 created a great deal of excitement in the town and county, and a company of volunteers was raised here for the war, of which Gen. Covell was the Captain, Gen. A. Gridley, 1st Lieutenant and M. Baldwin, 2d Lieutenant. Other than this, very little excitement of any kind was known to disturb the peace and quiet of the then little town. The few inhabitants that were then here were at peace with each other; the soil produced bountifully; produce of all kinds could be had in abundance at a "mere song;" and as one of the old citizens expressed it, they were enjoying a "little heaven upon earth," when all of sudden, the "steam horse" bursted upon them; the Goths and Vandals of the East came rushing in; property changed hands; log cabins and little frame houses gave place to large and beautiful residences; flower gardens and tastefully arranged shrubberies were desecrated with the erection of large blocks of three storied brick stores; and the very earth seemed to tremble with the heavy march of improvement!

These improvements caused a great advance in all kinds of produce, and is of course attributable to the facts of increased population and railroad facilities for shipment. In early times the only way for farmers in this county to get money, was to cart a load of wheat about 40 miles to Pekin, on the Illinois River. Then nothing but wheat would bring cash—all other kinds of produce had to be traded for store goods at extravagant prices. Many of our more wealthy farmers, however, did not pretend to sell their grain; but would feed it up to stock, for which, when grown and driven to Chicago or further east they got cash. Now all kinds of grain and produce sells readily for cash, and buyers are willing and anxious to purchase at good living prices.

The following table will show the increase of inhabitants in Bloomington from time to time;

In 1834,	census taken by	Allen Withers, Esq.,	contained.....	180

In 1850 the citizens thought it expedient to have a city organization. To get a city charter required a population of at least 1,500 inhabitants. The census was taken and the town found to contain, as above stated, 1,611 souls, whereupon a charter was obtained, and the requisite officers elected.

To the building of the two railroads (which intersect each other at this point) may be mostly attributed the recent rapid growth of the city. It is true that the place was in a healthy, growing condition, prior to their commencement; but not until they were commenced and completed did it assume the rapid growth and importance which it has attained.

The surveys for the Illinois Central Railroad commenced at this point in 1851. In the Spring of 1852 the work commenced, and in June, 1853, the cars were running south to this point. It was expected that the machine shops of the Central road would be located here; but the Company subsequently determined to build them at Wapella, and consequently only a passenger house, freight house, &c., were ereeted here.

In the spring of 1852 the surveys for the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad were made through this county, and in the fall of the same year the work commenced thereon near this place. In the fall of 1853 the cars were running from Springfield here, and in the spring of 1854 the road was completed through from Alton to Joliet, making a complete and speedy connection between St. Louis and Chicago. This being the best and most central point on the road, the Company decided to establish their machine shops and offices here, which have been and still are of very great advantage to the city; bringing, as they have, a large and valuable class of citizens to reside among us, and employing over five hundred hands as conductors, engineers, machinists, laborers, &c.

Great credit for their foresight and public spirit, is due to those who used their influence in the location of the two depots—making one on the east and the other on the west side of the city, about three-fourths of a mile apart. This wise and judicious policy has caused the city to expand towards both depots, spreading the city out over a much larger area than it otherwise would have, and leaving uninjured the old and central portion of the city.

On the night of Oct. 16th, 1855, a large and destructive fire broke out in the stable attached to the Morgan House, and before the flames could be arrested every building on the block, except the McLean County Bank, and Messrs. Dietrich & Bradner's hardware store, was laid in ruins. By it a large number of valuable citizens was suddenly deprived of storehouses, workshops and homes —leaving in their stead only the blackened ruins of a fearful conflagration. The loss was variously estimated at from 75,000 to 150,000 dollars.

CHURCHES.—The interests of religion and education have always been well and generously sustained in the community. The Methodists were the first denomination in the field, and held meetings for religious services at a very early day under the ministrations of Rev. James Latta, then upon their circuit. His field of labor was very extensive, embracing nearly the whole area of the State, and public meetings for worship, were for a long time "like angels visits, few and far between." Services were held in the houses of the people, afterward in an old log schoolhouse, where the Roman Catholic Church now stands. The first regular church organization was effected in 1832, meeting in the frame building erected upon the square for a Court House. The first church building was erected in 1834. Mr. Latta seems to have been a man of a good deal of influence in the early history of the settlement, and an efficient and faithful minister.

The Presbyterian church had an organization in 1834. Rev. M. C. Gouch, being first pastor. The Campbellite and Baptist denominations established themselves in the place soon after, the Baptists erecting a substantial church edifice. There are at present in the city eleven church buildings, representing seven religious denominations, as follows: Methodist 1, German Methodist 1, African Methodist 1, Presbyterian 3, Baptist 1, Episcopal 1, Christian 1, German Lutheran 1, Roman Catholic 1, besides a number of others, having no settled place of worship. Nearly all of these edifices are of a very handsome and tasteful appearance, and some of them possess high claims to elegance in architecture and internal finish.

EDUCATIONAL.—The first effort made toward establishing schools of a higher order was by Rev. Lemuel Foster, about the year 1835. He established a school for education in the higher branches, which he denominated an Academy, and which flourished for some time. Dr. Wm. C. Hubbs was one of the most successful. He had as pupils many who afterward became prominent in the history of the place and in other ways. He was a very useful man at public ceremonies and meetings in the early settlement of the place, always acting as master of ceremonies upon public occasions, and being also a prominent member of the Masonic Fraternity upon its first location in the place.

The Methodists erected the first University in 1854. The Board of Trustees of Wesleyan University was organized in 1852, and the present building erected soon after as stated. About the same time Mr. Major erected, at his own expense, the building known as the "Female Seminary." It was at first conducted by the Campbellite denomination, afterward by other parties, but again reverted to the church, for some years. It is now carried on by Professor H. O. Snow as Principal, assisted by an efficient and able faculty.

The Normal University of Illinois was created Feb. 18, 1857, by an Act of the Legislature. The interest of the University fund was set apart for its support with the express provision, that no portion of the income should be used in procuring or erecting buildings, but that it should be established in that town or city which should contribute most liberally for its accommodation, provided the proposed situation was not objectionable. The city of Bloomington, McLean County, and individuals, contributed lands and other property, valued at $140,000, and the Institution was fixed in its present location, during the summer of 1857. Work began at once on the building.

Charles E. Hovey, of Peoria, was elected Principal, and the school began Oct. 5, 1857, in rooms hired for that purpose in the city of Bloomington. The financial crisis, which immediately followed, caused a suspension of the work on the building for more than a year. At length, extraordinary difficulties having been surmounted, the house was so far completed, that the school opened in its rooms, at the beginning of its fourth year, in the Fall of 1860. During one year more its first Principal remained at its head, and its numbers and influence steadily increased. But in the summer of 1861, Mr. Hovey was commissioned as Colonel of the 33d Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, and four of the Faculty and more than half of the male students accompanied him to the field. In the following September, the school commenced its fifth year, under the management of Perkins Bass, Esq., of Chicago, as Acting Principal. At the close of this year, Richard Edwards, of the St. Louis Normal School, was chosen Principal, which post he still holds.

During the first term of the present year, the number of students in all departments of the Institution was 438, having increased steadily since the interruption in the summer of 1861.

The graduates and other students of the school are extensively scattered over the State, engaged in the work for which the commor lth by its liberality and wisdom, has fitted them: and this young Institution bids fair to accomplish the great good its friends have hoped and expected from it.

The Bloomington Observer, edited weekly, was the first newspaper published in Bloomington and the county, and was established in 1836 by Messrs. James Allin, Sen., Jesse Fell, and Mr. A. Gridley, and edited by Wm. Hill, afterward for a short time by Mr. Fell. In 1838 the Observer espoused the side of the Whig party in politics. The name was changed not long after to the Western Whig, and the paper conducted by C. P. Merriman, Esq. In 1852 the name was again changed to the Bloomington Intelligencer, the paper again passing under the management of Mr. Fell, who sold out in a year or two after to Mr. Merriman, and the sheet was baptized anew as the Pantagraph, by which it is still known. It was sold in 1856 to E. W. Foote, who published it until 1861, E. J. Lewis being the active editor.*

Other journals have been established at various times, and flourished for a brief period, to give place in turn to others, but none of them have survived for any length of time. Among them may be mentioned the Evening Argus, National Flag, afterward the Illinois Statesman, Illinois Central Democrat, Bloomington Times, and a number of others of more or less repute. The fire of editorial controversy, it may be assumed, waxed high at times, as we find in an old number of the Intelligencer a brief item to the effect that an article had appeared in the Flag containing a long array of abusive epithets against the editor of the former sheet, of which "dastardly whelp," "scoundrel," etc., were a great deal the mildest. "This, of course, brought on a personal encounter," continues the "responsible" editor, but adds the gratifying fact that "we were separated before either of us received any injury."

The history of ups and downs of newspaper life received an addition in the sudden demise of the Times, which came to an untimely end at the hands of the 94th Regiment Illinois Volunteers in 1861, when they were quartered in Bloomington. The paper had become obnoxious to many of the citizens by reason of its Southern proclivities, and expression of sympathy for the States then in rebellion, and the excitement became so great as to lead the soldiers, abetted by prominent citizens, to destroy the office and press, since which the paper has not been revived.

The McLean County Journal is published weekly by Messrs. Luse & Buck.

MANUFACTURES.—We present below some statistics with regard to the various manufactures of the city as far as we have been able to obtain them.

The extensive Car and Machine Shops of the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis R. R., located at this point, occupy six acres of ground, including a first class Foundry, Round House, etc. Over 500 hands are now employed in these works, and $30,000 monthly is paid out to the various employes. The amount of stores used monthly is $75,000; of this $10,000 worth of material is used monthly in the car shops alone, which have a capacity for turning out a completely finished car every day when in full operation. The manufacture in this department reaches 10 passenger and 150 freight cars annually, besides numerous repairs, amounting to $8,000 or $9,000 monthly. The repairs upon Locomotives, including those rebuilt here, average $18,000 per month. The Company are now erecting a new stone Round House, nearly completed, at an estimated cost of $57,000.

The Bloomington Manufacturing Co., E. Barber, President, C. W. C. Munsel, Secretary, Geo. W. Parke, General Agent, was established in 1865, for the manufacture of Steam Engines, Agricultural Implements, Reapers, Mowers, Threshers, and general Machinery. The works were previously carried on by E. Barber. The Company occupy a large building 250 by 50 feet, and three stories high, with a capacity for employing 150 workmen. The works include an extensive Foundry, Machine Shop, Wood Department, etc., with the best facilities for manufacturing to be found anywhere in Central Illinois.

Bloomington Foundry, Allis & Son, proprietors, has been in operation over two years. Building, 75 by 25 feet, two stories in height. The works comprise Foundry, Machine Shop, Blacksmith and Pattern Shops. Their principal business is the manufacture of Engines and Machinery. They employ 30 hands and do a business to the amount of $25,000 annually.

Brokaw, Ellsworth & Co.'s Plow Factory, has been in operation in the present building—40 by 100 feet—since 1857. Over 1,500 plows are manufactured yearly, using 10 tons of iron and steel, and 20,000 feet of lumber in their construction.

This firm have been engaged in this branch of manufacture in this city for nearly thirty years.

Hayes & Evans' Bloomington Planing Mill and Sash and Blind Factory occupy a building some 80 by 30 feet, and two stories high. Have been in operation seven years. Number of men employed, 35; amount of lumber used for the current year, 1,500,000 feet. Amount of business yearly, $60,000.

Bacon & Mahaffey have a Steam Planing Mill, which has been in operation since 1858. The machinery is run by an engine of 10 horse power. Building, 48 by 52 feet.

G. Ferre's Carriage and Wagon Factory occupies a building 23 by 66 feet, and three stories high. Twelve hands are employed, and 30 wagons and 20 carriages, of all sorts, turned out yearly.

Louis Matern has a Carriage and Wagon Shop in a building 50 by 36 feet, has been engaged 12 years in the business. Employs 10 hands, and turn out $10,000 worth of work yearly.

Flinspack & Diffenour have a Wagon and Carriage Shop, employing six hands, and turn out 25 vehicles yearly. Size of building, 46 by 35 feet. Have been for five years engaged in this branch of manufactures.

Grover, Winslow & Co.'s Soap and Candle Factory has been in operation since 1857, occupying the present building—30 by 100 feet, and two stories high. They employ six hands, and use 400,000 lbs of stock, including lard, tallow, etc., and turn out $40,000 worth of manufactures yearly.

Dr. Wakefield's Manufactory of Patent Medicines occupies a building 30 by 82 feet, three stories and basement, and gives employment to 20 workmen throughout the year. The building is divided into rooms for the manufacture of tinctures, syrups, pills, etc., and provided with a printing office and press for the publication of an Almanac in German and English. Materials to the amount of $50,000 are used yearly in the manufacture of Wakefield's Patent Medicines.

Mayers, Son & Co.'s Steam Woolen Factory and Flour Mill employs 18 hands and uses in the manufacture of goods over 36,000 lbs of wool yearly, using. also from 30,000 to 40,000 bushels grain. Has been running since 1856, and contains two sets spinning apparatus, four looms, and two sets cards.

The Novelty Flour Mills, Hains & Robbins, proprietors, have been running for three months, employ seven hands, and turn out 25 bbls. of flour daily. Building 40 by 70 feet.

McLean County Mills, S. D. Barber & Co., proprietors, have been in operation 12 years, occupying a building 64 by 28 feet, employ eight hands, and use 75,000 bushels wheat, and 15,000 bushels corn yearly.

Eagle Mills, T. J. Cox, proprietor, built by Stephenson & Doffit, have been carried on for six years by the present proprietor, and employ 15 hands, consuming 60,000 bushels of grain annually, and turning out 50 bbls. flour per day. Building 52 by 13 feet, two stories high.

Bloomington Mills, built 1865, by the present owners and proprietors, H. B. Cranmer, of Cincinnati, and Webster & Baxter, of Chicago, has capacity to turn out 150 bbls. of flour, and 100 bbls of meal daily. Attached to this Mill is a Patent Corn Dryer. During the short time this Mill has been running, they have used over 2,500 bushels of grain.

Bloomington Steam Brewery, W. T. Ragland, proprietor, has been in operation a year and a half, manufactures Ale and Porter exclusively, and turns out 1,200 bbls. the current year. Facilities for manufacturing 1,000 bbls. a month. Building 50 by 40 feet.

COMMERCIAL.—The following table, compiled from statistics obtained by careful enquiry, will serve to give an idea of the amount of business annually transacted in Bloomington:

Amount of Freight shipped via C., A. & St. L. R. R.	56,389,563 lbs.
" " " Illinois Central R. R.	41,277,247 "

BLOOMINGTON GAS WORKS—A. Gridley, proprietor, were established in 1855. Ten hands are employed, and 1,200 tons coal used annually. About 300,000 cubic feet of gas are used monthly in the place by 300 consumers.

HORTICULTURAL.—The city has maintained from a very early day a high rank among other cities of the State, with regard to the beauty and attractiveness of its surroundings, as shown by the number and variety of shade trees, handsome and elegantly kept private grounds, and extensive nurseries and vineyards. Mr. K. H. Fell has been engaged for a number of years in the grape culture in the city, and his efforts towards propagating the different varieties which are successfully cultivated in this climate, have been carried on with a degree of vigor and sound scientific judgment, which have led to the most gratifying results. Mr. Fell has now some five acres of ground under cultivation, comprising 5,000 plants of different varieties; prominent among them the Concord, Delaware, Diana, and many others of the hardier varieties. To Mr. Fell's labors are due some valuable discoveries in the mode of propagating the vine which have proved of great popularity, and have been generally adopted by competitors, as well as the general public. He was the originator of deep tilling and plowing in grape culture, as a substitute for the old and expensive process of manuring, employing the latter only when the ground is poor and calls for a generous mode of treatment. His plan of trimming vines in the fall, and burying them during the frosts of winter, has also proved itself to be founded upon sound scientific principles, and has been attended with surprising success. It has been demonstrated by the liberal and energetic experiments of Mr. Fell, that any one, with proper foresight and prudence, can have a vineyard, including choice varieties, at a comparatively small expense; and it is not too much to say that he has conferred very important benefits upon the citizens of Bloomington and the surrounding country, which are not limited in their influence to any part of the State.

PHŒNIX NURSERY.—This nursery was commenced in 1852, and covers over two hundred and eighty acres, open, rolling prairie, of which some ninety acres are to apple trees; thirty-five to pear; twenty-eight to peach; ten to plum and cherry; twenty to grapes; six to small fruits; ten to ornamental trees and plants; twenty-five to evergreens; seven to roses, having over six hundred varieties, both native and foreign. For propagating and plants, eight large greenhouses, besides frames, in which over 10,000 square feet of glass are used. In 1863, on trees three to seven years old, over two hundred and fifty bushels of apples of one hundred different sorts were raised, besides many pear, peach, plum, cherry, grape, &c., which affords an excellent test as to the hardihood and adaptation of varieties West—an important but neglected point.

Some idea may be had of the magnitude of this Nursery from the fact that he employs over one hundred men during the whole year, and at the busy season over three hundred. The sales of last year amounted to over $300,000.

SCHROEDER'S NURSERY.—Is located near the Cemetery, and, being centrally located, offers superior inducements to purchasers—though not as large as Phœnix Nursery, the qualities of his fruit cannot be excelled; and we may add that many of the grape growers of the West are indebted to Dr. Herman Schroeder for many of their choice varieties.

To conclude our necessarily brief and imperfect sketch, it is only necessary to indulge in a passing allusion to the present of the city and its prospects for future prosperity. Possessing a situation second to none, and commanding the trade of a region richly blessed by nature, with all the resources of climate, and a soil of inexhaustable, and as yet, almost undeveloped fertility, improved by the hand of science and practical talent, abounding in an industrious and educated population, Bloomington has every advantage which her intimate connection with the great Agricultural interest of the county and State can bestow. Placed upon two lines of communication with the two great centers of Western trade—St. Louis and Chicago—and through them bound to the East and South, a vast field is opened to the activity and industry of her people. Further than this, she possesses in the enterprise and public spirit of her citizens and business men of all classes, a fund of never-failing strength and resources, upon which to draw for her future advancement in all that constitutes the honor and prosperity of a community.

The location of the city is very fine, being upon high ground, including a number of beautiful hills and slopes, affording delightful sites for residences, and insuring an excellent drainage through all parts of the city. It is an admirable spot in a business point of view; high and dry with excellent basements and cellars for storage, while the surrounding country is rich in groves of trees, beautiful residences and gardens, giving proof of wealth and culture to an unusual degree. In fact evidences of taste and refinement everywhere abound among her citizens, and give reason for the pride which they manifest in their beautiful city; and in addition to this, the location of the State Normal University, the Wesleyan University and the Public Schools are an honor to the district, while the Evangelical Churches are so numerous, so well-appointed and so united in friendly intercourse, that it really adds a great charm to the location of the city.

The business of the city, as may be seen by reference to our figures, is remarkably flourishing, and will compare favorably with that of any place of equal size in the State. The fine business blocks surrounding the square, and upon the principal business streets, are an honor to the city, and some of them hardly to be excelled even in much larger places. The accommodations for the traveling public afforded by the hotels throughout the city, are of the best character, and go far towards making it attractive to strangers and others who "love to take their ease at their inn." In a word for an enterprising, go-ahead little city, combining the best facilities for business with all the refinements and comforts of a pleasant home, commend us to Bloomington. None will more heartily wish her a God speed in her career of prosperity and usefulness than the publishers of this work.

We beg leave here to express our grateful sense of the many obligations we are under to the citizens of Bloomington for the uniform courtesy and liberality by which we have been met in pursuing our present undertaking, and in especial manner to Messrs. James Allin, Sen., William H. Hodge, and Messrs. K. H. and Jesse Fell for valuable assistance and information furnished us in compiling the present sketch of the city.

Blue Mound Township

Is in the third tier of townships from the south and the third from the eastern boundary. It is entirely prairie, sufficiently undulating and good farming land. It is watered by Money Creek, running through the southeastern corner, and other streams of less magnitude. There are six schools in the township. Corn is raised principally, but all crops common to this latitude are considered to do well. Population 636. No Post Office.

Cheney Grove Township

Is in the eastern tier of townships and the second from the southern boundary. It is well wooded, probably one fifth of the surface being covered with timber. The soil is as good as any in the county and of the same general character. It is watered by Sangamon River and its tributaries together with other small streams. There are two saw mills in the township and one grist mill, (at Saybrook.) It is supposed that coal can be found in the township, from the fact that it has been washed out of the soil in the neighborhood of a certain spring from which the water flows with great force, rising to a level of ten feet above the surface. There are five schools in the township and two churches, (Methodist.) Corn is the staple, though all root crops do well and considerable attention is paid to Sorghum. Jonathan Cheney was the first settler, in 1827. Population 841.

Saybrook is a post village of Cheney Grove township, containing about 300 inhabitants, 28½ miles east from Bloomington, on the Bloomington and Saybrook stage route. It has one church, two schools, one lodge A. F. & A. M., four general stores, with blacksmith shops, wagon shop, etc. The Methodist denomination erected in 1864 a very elegant and tasteful church building, at a cost of $15,000, which would do credit to a much larger and older place. It was built by subscription, and is an honorable testimony to the liberality and public spirit of the citizens. There is an Academy for the instruction of students of both sexes in the higher branches of an English education, connected with this church.

Chenoa Township

Is in the northern tier of townships and the second from the eastern boundary. It is all prairie land. All kinds of grain products are raised in abundance, as the soil is good and the township is settled by an industrious farming community. The land is owned, mostly, in 80 acre tracts, buyers generally purchasing in small tracts and speculators having sold off most of their lands. It is watered by Turkey Creek, Empty Creek and some other smaller streams. Population 1099.

Chenoa, Chenoa township, is a young and thriving town at the junction of C. A. & St. L. R. R. with the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw R. R. It was laid out but a short time before the crash of 1857, in a country almost destitute of population, there not being over five families within six miles of it when the stakes were planted by the original founder, Mr. M. T. Scott. Its location, on these main thoroughfares, give it advantages not excelled by any other village in the state, as very few have such direct connection with the two great cities west of the Alleghany mountains and at the same time both eastern and western connections of the most desirable character to farmers, traders and merchants. In the rapid settlement of the country these advantages will become evident to any observer, and will doubtless develop Chenoa into an inland town of the first order. There is now no doubt that the town is underlaid by a fine bed of coal, which enterprise will soon work, when the village will at once become of importance as a manufacturing place.

Among the early settlers of Chenoa were M. T. Scott, Dr. R. W. McMahan, John McMahan, J. P. McKnight, Campbell Sallee, John Bush, J. B. Lenney, Joseph Minton, Joel Hicks, John McCune and Benjamin Herr. These, mainly, comprise the inhabitants of the first year in Chenoa.

The population of the village and township has more than doubled within the last ten months, and almost every day brings to light a new house for a family residence or for business, and they still come and find room and inducements to remain. The various christian denominations are well represented in the place. The O. S. Presbyterians alone, have a church edifice, which is used also by the United Presbyterians. The Methodists also have an organization; the Baptists and Episcopalians are about to organize, and there will, doubtless, be in a short time church buildings for all these various denominations. The citizens have recently procured means to erect a graded school house, to cost from $8,000 to $10,000, which will be completed the coming summer or fall.

There is no department of trade or business in which there is not an increasing demand for enterprising men, and residence and business lots are to be had at very low rates compared with other thriving towns. A planing mill and a number of good warehouses for grain, are much needed. With a present population of from five to six hundred inhabitants there are two drug, one hardware, three grocery and five general stores, two hotels, one steam flour mill, one wagon and plow factory, together with other mechanical shops.

Cropsey Township

Is situated in the eastern tier of townships, and the third from the western boundary line. The country is almost entirely prairie land and the soil is good. It is watered by Mackinaw Creek, which flows through the northern part. Corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley and vegetables of all kinds are raised.

Dale Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the south and the second from the western boundary line. It is mostly an open country, rather rolling, and has about two hundred acres of timbered land. Corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, barley, some buckwheat and sorghum are raised. Large numbers of cattle and stock are raised and a great many sheep have been lately brought into the township. Sugar creek runs through the township. There is one church, Christian, and six schools. Population 1,100.

Shirley is a post village of Dale township, with about 100 inhabitants, on the C. A. & St. L. R. R., six miles southwest from Bloomington; it has one general store and one school. The principal trade is in grain, the following are the shipments, in round numbers, for the year '65, corn 100,000 bu., wheat 250,000 bu., hay 300 tons, stock 3000 head.

Danvers Township

Is situated in the third tier of townships from the southern boundary of the county on the western boundary line. It is well timbered; the proportion of prairie to timber being about as four to one. All of the land in the township is good farming land and well improved. The face of the country is rolling, and it is well watered by Rock Creek and other smaller streams. Corn and wheat are the principal productions, considerable pork and beef are also raised, also vegetables of all kinds. There is in the township one flour mill, (at Concord,) and one saw mill, six churches, Methodist, Congregationalist, Cumberland Presbyterian, (Concord), Christian, and two of a German sect called Ormish. All have church buildings. There are ten good school houses in the township, in all of which school is taught at least six months in the year. Matthew Robb and Levi Danly are the oldest settlers now living, and came into it in 1830. The first church organized was the Cumberland Presbyterian, about thirty-five years ago. Population about 1,600.

Concord is a thriving village of Danvers Township, situated about 11 miles north-west from Bloomington, on the Bloomington and Pekin stage route. It has three general stores, one grocery, one tin, stove and hardware store, two harness shops, two carpenter and cabinet shops, one cooper shop, one wagon and plow maker, three blacksmiths and wagon makers, two boot and shoe makers, and the population is about 300. There are three religious denominations represented in the place; Methodist, Congregationalist, and Cumberland Presbyterian, all having good houses of worship, and entirely out of debt. There are two schools, a primary, and higher or grammar school. A fine school building has just been completed at a cost of nearly $2,500. There is one flour mill in the village Considerable business is done for a small place; two firms making sales of $20,000 each annually. James G. Rayburn was the first settler in the village, about 1836. There is one Lodge of Good Templars in the village.

Downs Township

Is in the southern tier of Townships and the third west of the eastern boundary. It is almost entirely a prairie Township. There are some few acres of timber in the north-eastern portion. It is watered by Kickapoo Creek, running through the north-eastern corner, and other small streams. There are eight schools in the township. Corn is the staple grain product, though other crops are raised, principally wheat, oats and rye. Population, 1,136.

Delta is a small post village of Downs Township, on the Bloomington and LeRoy mail route.

Dry Grove Township

Is in the third tier of Townships from the south, and second east of the western boundary. It is about one-sixth timber, and the remainder good farming land, slightly rolling. It is watered by Sugar Creek and smaller streams. Corn is chiefly raised, though all the grain staples are raised with a good degree of success. There is one saw mill and eight schools in the township. Population, 1,175.

Empire Township*

Was originally a part of Tazewell County, but in 1830 was ceded to this County, and lies sixteen miles south-east of Bloomington, the county seat of McLean County; joining DeWitt County on the south line of McLean being six miles from east to west, and eight miles from north to south. The Congressional Township consists of Town No. twenty-two, north of range four east of the third principal meridian, and two miles off of the north side of town twenty-one, north of range four east of the third principal meridian. The above territory now forms the Township of Empire, originally called LeRoy. There being another township of the same name in the State, the citizens were by law compelled to give the town some other name, and the name of Empire was selected by S. A. Moore, Esq., now of LeRoy, and was ratified by the people in 1858. This township was settled in 1828 by John Buckles and family, consisting of nine sons and three daughters, they having emigrated from Virginia while this State was yet a territory, and none but the red man inhabited the township now called Empire.

In 1828 John Buckles and sons erected a small log cabin three-quarters of a mile south of where LeRoy now stands, and the same year Jesse Funk and Mr. Burlinson, who lived in Randolph Grove, now called Randolph Township, erected a camp by felling large oaks and splitting the logs and making a low house by which they where sheltered, while their hogs fatted on acorns and nuts, the mast being very plenty and rich that year. The next year was a partial failure in this Grove, but mast was plenty in what was then called Hurley's Grove, now in DeWitt County, and John Buckles and sons drove their hogs to Hurley's Grove to fatten. Hogs at that time came in contact with the wolf quite often, and learned to fight their way, and many a bell tinkled on the neck of the old and experienced hog as well as other animals; and it was frequently the case that parties owning hogs would have to hunt them as they would the deer or wolf, and when found would shoot them, and, after dressing the animal they would preserve the meat and convert the hide into shoes for their own use.

In 1830, John Buckles built a tan yard in the following style: He chopped down a large burr oak tree and cut out a trough or two, and then put in the hides as accumulated, and made leather; not so good in some respects as we have now, but far better to wear. Many trees bore the mark for years of the Indian ax, and it was no uncommon thing to see an Indian passing through, but no trouble with them ever existed. Political matters and opinions were then, as now, divided between two parties, and each being equally anxious to elect their favorite, frequently the opposite party was then, as now, accused of everything but honesty and principle. The Counties of Tazewell, Sangamon, Bond, Montgomery, Shelby, Moultrie, Vermillion, Effingham, Fayette and Macon made up the Representative District. There was no McLean, DeWitt, Piatt, and, I believe, Champaign Counties. James M. Rutledge, of Montgomery County, stumped the District to some extent, in favor of a Mr. Posey and Black for Representatives, we being entitled to two, and I think they were both elected.

In 1829, John Buckles and sons, with the aid of some eight or ten men from what is now Logan County, erected a large two story log house, that stands at the present time where it was erected, somewhat the worse for age and natural decay. In 1830 quite a number of others immigrated to this grove, formerly called Buckles' Grove, and yet known by that name by many of the old settlers. Catherine Johnson, Alvin Barnett, Richard Edwards, William Davis, Silas Watters, James Lawrence, Michael Dickerson, Levi Westfall, Henry Huddleston, William Conaway, Aquilla Conaway, Thomas O. Rutledge, Henry and Daniel Crumbaugh, Nathan Brittin, Ambrose Hall, Sally Rutledge, James Merrifield, Samuel Merrifield, Amos Conaway, James Barnett, who with their families, made up the inhabitants of the Grove in 1830 and 1831.

In December, 1830, occurred the famous deep snow, ending in January, 1831, the snow being four feet deep on a level; and in many places where it had drifted, ten and twelve feet deep. There being no mill in the settlement, and snow so deep, and little stock and few inhabitants, roads were not opened very fast, and many a grain of corn was prepared for food with lye, and many a grain was mashed into meal in the hominy block.

In the Fall of 1830, the township abounded in game of nearly all kinds, including deer, turkey, prairie chickens, ducks, wild geese, brants, quails and pigeons. The black, prairie and grey wolf abounded in great numbers, and lived well on the starved game during the winter of the Deep Snow. There were also, the rabit, red and grey fox, muskrat, otter, badger, timber squirrel, and many other of the smaller feather and vermin kind, too numerous to mention. Also of the snake family, the bull, rattle, blue, chicken, garden, joint, water, moccasin, copperhead and viper. Many of the above were very plenty, and somewhat annoying to both man and beast. The bull snake was often found ten and twelve feet long, and their hide dressed, made a neat strap for a pouch. Also the land and water turtle. Salt Creek, in the early settlement of the township, abounded with fish, such as cat, pike, sucker, sun, perch, and many other of the finny tribe.

In 1830, and many years after, bees were numerous, especially the honey bee and many a sturdy oak was cut down only to take captive the bee, and get the fruits of their labor. In many instances, the honey comb found in their natural palaces, were three and four feet in length. None were so skilled in this species of wood-craft as the Buckles family; and if the bee, turkey, wolf and deer were like the red man of the forest, they would always hold the male portion of the Buckles family as their worst enemies. But the wild bee, with the other various kinds, of game, are rapidly passing away, and with all the skill and care that the lover of the bee can give, with all the improvements in bee hives, the moth will make inroads into the family, and soon lay waste and leave them desolate in their fine palaces, as well as in the old elm and lynn gum, reminding us all that the cold hand of death will make inroads into the family of the rich as well as poor.

Deer and turkey died in 1841 from starvation, to a fearful extent. It was but little trouble to capture the deer that winter, the snow being so deep and the deer becoming so poor, that after a few efforts to escape their pursuers they were exhausted and easily captured. Many were captured, put in pounds and even becoming somewhat domesticated.

Every family in 1830 and 1831 was the owner of three or four dogs of different breeds. The long eared blood hound was quite a favorite among the Kentucky settlers for hunting coons. The grey hound and half-breed cur and bull-dog, were also great favorites among those who had become more "suckerized," for chasing the wolf, deer, wild cat, coon, fox, &c., until in 1832 the hydrophobia began to seize upon the dogs, and prevailed with great violence. Two persons, by the names of Ennis Neal and Mary Rutledge, were said to have been bitten; such a shudder as prevailed throughout the whole community, can only be imagined. But in both cases it did neither of them any serious harm.

In the spring of 1830, Thomas O. Rutledge, sen., selected a burial ground east of where LeRoy now stands, he died in August the same year, and was buried on the spot selected by him, being the first white person that was committed to the grave in that township.

In April 1832, the war trumpet was sounded, and several from the township responded to the call against the indians under Black Hawk. They rendezvoused at Bloomington, in this county, consisting of fifty-six men, and elected Merritt L. Covell, captain, afterwards widely known as General Covell, and Ashael Gridley, now living in Bloomington, and better known as Col. A. Gridley, and were by them led to the battle-field, at Sycamore, against Black Hawk's forces.

After a hard fought battle, the settlers came off victorious, with the loss of one man killed, eleven wounded, and thirteen horses killed. After a campaign of some five months, they returned home champions of the field.

James R. Johnson, N. T. Brittin, and Isaac Murphy, are yet living, who participated in the campaign against Blackhawk's forces.

Salt Creek took its name from salt springs being found on the stream, and the name was given by the Kickapoo Indians. The head waters on the west fork are in Downs Township, consisting of fords and small rivulets, and form a channel in Downs Township before entering Empire, flowing nearly due east for some three miles, where it connects with the east branch which rises in West and Padua Townships, on the east and north of Empire, and flows through Sections 15, 22, 27, and 33, and near the center of Section 33 the two creeks unite, forming quite a stream.

The fall of 1832, the citizens erected a log school house near the southwest corner of the northeast quarter of Section 28, and near where James Kimler now lives, being the centre of the settlement, and many went to school, both boys and girls, a distance of three and four miles. William Johnson who lives in the township at this time taught the first school ever held in the Grove. He commenced his school before the school house was completed, and taught some weeks in a log house that stood near where Henry C. Dickerson now lives and when the school house was completed removed his school to the first school house ever erected in the township of Empire. Amasa Washburn and lady, Mr. Gaunt, Thomson, and James Vandeventer, taught in the same school house for several years. At this time the township was one school district, and peace and harmony prevailed among all; Amasa Washburn and lady had the honor of forming the first Sabbath School ever taught in the township; and on the Sabbath, Rev. Reuben Clearwater, Rev. Jesse Frankenberger, Rev. Thomas Lowery, or the Rev. William Weaver, would preach a sermon to the people, and all would listen attentively and seemed to enjoy hearing the instructions uttered by those old and good men. Some of them have long since paid the debt we all must sooner or later pay. And the instructions given by them and the example set in their daily walk was "like bread cast upon the water," which may be seen after many days. In 1837, Section 16 was sold for school purposes, James Bishop and Mahlon Bishop, were the principal purchasers, paying some $12 or $15 per acre. The township funds now amount to $5,000, all in good hands, and interest paid promptly. We now have 13 school districts in the township, and eleven school houses. By the last census, taken in September, 1865, there were attending school 244 males, and 275 females, all having good teachers, and making fine progress.

LeRoy was laid out in 1835 by Colonel A. Gridley and M. L. Covell. The sale of lots took place in December, 1835, and many a lot sold for three times what they would now sell for. One half a mile south of where LeRoy now is situated was the first village that the township can boast of. The would-be great city was called Monroe. John W. Baddely gave it the name, and he erected a large log house for a store-room, and many a dollar was taken and given in bartering for calico, furs, etc. This was before LeRoy was laid out. There being but ten acres of land owned by John W. Baddely, others thought that too small a lot to erect a city on. Hence the propriety of going up on the prairie, and Mr. Baddeley was induced to give up his town and join the proprietors of LeRoy, and he received some 22 choice lots as a gift to abandon his town. The present township of Empire by the census of 1865, numbers some 450 legal voters, and 2,107 inhabitants, being natives of Kentucky, Tennesee, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Pensylvania, and real "Suckers," as well as a few English, Irish and German. The township is a little rolling, and is well drained by nature, with a little improvement by ditching. It has some 13½ sections of timbered land. The prairie is rich and very productive, and has a fair average farming community for our county. Corn, buck wheat, oats, rye, barley, sorghum, and potatoes, are raised in abundance. Water and musk melons, and many other kinds of fruit grow and abound in great quantities. The township is destitute of coal, and nearly so of limestone. The water, generally, is hard, and in some instances so hard as to render it almost impossible to cook with. Near one-third of the farmers haul their grain to Bloomington or Heyworth, and sell to grain merchants, while a part sell to cattle and hog feeders. For about ten years since the first settlement, corn has been worth 50 cents per bushel at the crib, and yet being as low as five and six cents per bushel, and wheat, as low as 25 cents per bushel. In 1843, '44 and '45 our market was Chicago, and it was no small task to haul wheat and other products to that point. The town of LeRoy was incorporated in 1853, which has been a great detriment to the place, the statute law being far better in the opinion of many, for the good of so small a place. LeRoy has 80 voters, and 757 inhabitants, is three quarters of a mile square, and is not improving like many other places in our county. It has one large two-story brick school house, two old churches, the M. E. Church and Cumberland Presbyterian, one Masonic Lodge, No. 221, one I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 149; the former has 40, and the latter 35 members; four blacksmith shops, two wagon shops, one steam flouring and saw mill, one large and well constructed hotel, six dry goods stores, three grocery stores, four liquor, and one billiard saloon, one tin shop, two drug stores, two shoe shops, two harness shops, one cabinet shop, five physicians, one horse farrier, four ministers, one post office called LeRoy, one millinery shop, and quite a number of house carpenters, two brick masons, five plasterers, five tailors, two justices, one lawyer. There are also some 200 children attending school, under the management of Dr. D. Cheney, —— Greenman, and —— Arnold; they being the school directors chosen by the people; and as far as we are informed the people of LeRoy can boast of having good schools. The schools are graded, there being four large school rooms and four good teachers employed by the directors. There are two Sabbath Schools kept up winter and summer, and each well attended by the young and old, and none have as yet in the county made greater progress in learning. As to vocal music, the school children would charm the old and young, when their voices mingle together in some appropriate hymn when they meet at Sabbath School.

It is now contemplated by the two churches before spoken of, to erect two large brick church edifices which will be quite an improvement to the place, and one certainly very much needed.

Funk's Grove Township

Is in the first tier of townships on the south and the second from the western boundary of the county. It is well wooded, the proportion of timber and prairie being about as one to ten. The surface of the country is gently rolling, the soil is good and water is abundant. Sugar Creek runs through the township which is also watered by many smaller streams of running water. It is an excellent stock country, being probably the largest stock raising township in the entire county. There is one steam saw mill in the township. The Methodists and Christians have each a society and church organization. There are three good primary schools. Isaac and Absalom Funk were the earliest settlers in the township, about the year 1822 or '23, Wm. Brock also located in the township about the same time, and Robert Stubblefield soon after. The first church organized was the Methodist, about thirty-five years ago.

The first settlers brought with them one horse, two yoke of cattle and about two hundred dollars in money. The results which have sprung from these small beginnings, the immense herds of stock, smiling fields, and the evident wealth and prosperity of the country, so evident to an observer, speak volumes in favor of the enterprise and thrift of these hardy pioneers of civilization in the county. At the time of this settlement there were three families at Blooming Grove, where the city of Bloomington now stands, this being the only settled point nearer than Peoria. All the blacksmithing was done at Springfield and also all the grist ground for a number of years, until a mill was erected on Salt creek, 30 miles distant, where the grist was hauled on sleds, summer and winter, wagons not being so plenty then as now. As late as the third or fourth winter it is related that Mr. Funk made rails, at 25 cts. per 100, to buy corn for bread at a dollar a bushel. This simple incident will serve to illustrate the hardships of life in those early times. Mr. Funk followed raising and driving stock, in early years, to Ohio, and afterwards to markets nearer home. He was the first to drive cattle and hogs to Galena, and continued for some fifteen years to drive to Chicago, selling principally to packers there. The journey, in those days, was attended by great privations and many difficulties, especially when undertaken for the purpose of conveying stock. There were no roads, and in the winter season drovers were sometimes compelled to drag a log over the frozen surface, in order to make a path through the deep snow which the animals could follow. In camping out it was necessary to throw down quantities of brush to build a fire upon, the snow being often of great depth. Upon urgent business Mr. Funk was often accustomed to make the journey in a day and night—riding all night long.

The Indians were numerous in the early history of the settlement, being of the Kickapoo, Pottawattomie and Winnebago tribes. They always remained friendly to the settlers however, and strictly respected their rights, even to the extent of herding their horses and other animals, before enclosures and fences were made to prevent their injuring the growing crops. Trade was carried on with them for venison, for which bacon, milk, etc., was exchanged. Hog and hominy, however, was the staple diet for many years.

The Hon. Isaac Funk was early and long identified with the history of the settlement and indeed of the entire county. He was State Senator at the time of his death, in 1865, from the 10th Senatorial district. He was a man of remarkable simplicity, integrity and kindness of heart, and these qualities made him well known and honored through the country, even more than his immense wealth. His eloquent and indignant denunciation of traitors at home, as well as in arms against the government, delivered in the State Senate, will be long remembered as an outburst of natural oratory not often to be met with in such bodies.

The population of the township is about 600. No post office.

Gridley Township

Is in the northern tier of townships on the western boundary line of the county. It is composed of one and a half Congressional township, and is almost entirely prairie land there being a few acres of timber in the southwestern portion. Mackinaw creek runs through the southern portion and it is also watered by Buck creek and some smaller streams. The soil is generally of the best quality and capable of cultivation with good success. The Peoria and Oquawka R. R. passes through the south side of the northern tier of sections. The first settler in the township was Taylor Loving as early as 1832. Isaiah and Jonathan Coon, James Wilson, Joseph Stretch, John Messer and Joseph McNaught, who located on the borders of Mackinaw Creek, were the earliest settlers. There are six churches in the township, two Campbellite, two Methodist, one United Presbyterian and one Congregational, also six schools. Population 1088.

Gridley, Gridley township, is a small town with a population of 162 inhabitants, on the Peoria, Toledo and Burlington R. R., 25 miles N. E. of Bloomington, The Ill. Central R. R. runs seven miles west and the C. A. & St. L. R. R. eight miles east of the place. The village was laid out in the fall of 1856, on Sec. 4, township 26, north of range 3 east of the 3d principal meridian, and the cars commenced running to this point in 1857. The business of the place is carried on by three general stores, two lumber yards, one coal dealer, two grain dealers, one hotel, one harness shop, one shoe maker, one carriage and wagon shop, one meat market, two physicians.

The shipments from the place for 12 months ending Nov. 30, 1865, were 63,145 bus. corn, 78 head of cattle, 135 head of hogs, 105 dressed hogs, 41 bbls. eggs, 19,980 lbs. green hides, 60 bbls. tallow, 1,100 tons of hay, the total value being $79,679 70. The receipts at the station for the same time for freight and tickets were $11,000.

Hudson Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the north and the third from the western boundary of the county. The surface of the country is between rolling and level and mostly good farming land, the proportion of timber to prairie being as one to four. It is well watered by Money Creek, Six Mile Creek, Mackinaw Creek and other smaller streams of living water. There is one good flour and saw mill on Mackinaw Creek and good water power generally on these streams, but not improved. There are five school districts, with schools taught in all six months in the year, two churches, (in Hudson,) Methodist and Baptist, with good church edifices. Jesse Havens was the first settler, in 1829, Benjamin Wheeler also came in the same year, and John Smith in 1832. The first church organized was the United Brethren, in 1832, Rev. John Durham being the first minister. The first school was taught about the same time. The first marriage was that of John Smith and Miss Anna Havens; both are now livlng in Hudson. The first settlers endured considerable privations, being obliged to pound their grain for bread or grind it in hand mills. They lived mostly upon venison and wild game, hunting often with the Indians, the Kickapoos and Pottowatomies, who inhabited the country, and who always showed a friendly disposition to the settlers. Mr. Havens, one of the early settlers, relates that he was once water-bound on a journey and obliged to live for sixteen days upon boiled corn alone. There was a small settlement at Bloomington, consisting of one log house, but Peoria was the nearest point of any size, and a considerable part of the trading was done at St. Louis. This township is now one of the best improved in the county and offers strong inducements to settlers. Population 1161.

Hudson, Hudson township, is a village of about 350 inhabitants, on the Ill. Central R. R., nine miles north of Bloomington. It contains two churches, Methodist and Baptist, both with good houses of worship. There is one primary school in the place. There are also three general stores, one hand broom factory, two blacksmith and wagon shops, four carpenters and three practising physicians. A good steam flour mill and warehouse for handling and storing grain, would be a profitable investment in this place and is much needed; considerable shipments in grain and stock are made, amounting to 106,530 bus. grain and 1,192 head of stock for the current year. James T. Gildersleeve was the first settler, in 1836.

Lawndale Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the north, and the second west of the eastern boundary. There is some timber in the south eastern corner of the township. The surface of the country is gently undulating and the soil is as good as in the greater portion of the county. Mackinaw Creek runs through the southeastern corner; it is also watered by Henline's Creek and some smaller streams. Corn, wheat, oats, rye and barley, with all the root crops, are raised. There is one flour and one saw mill in the townsip, also four schools. Population 625. No post office.

Lexington Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the north, and the third from the eastern boundary. It is well timbered, about one-fourth of the whole area being timber land. It is well watered by Mackinaw Creek and its numerous tributaries: Turkey Creek, Crooked Creek, Patten's Branch, and others of less magnitude. The surface is generally undulating prairie, and the soil is rich and fertile. All the common cereals and other crops raised in this latitude do well. There is one flour and one saw mill in the township; also, 8 schools. Population, 2,174.

Lexington is an incorporated town, beautifully located on parts of sections seven and eight in Lexington Township, being 25 north of range, four east of the third principal meridian in McLean County, Illinois, on the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis Rail Road, distant 17 miles from Bloomington, and 108 miles from Chicago; has a population of 1,100 inhabitants. It is a thriving town, there being a good and healthful commercial and mechanical business done, it is also a shipping point of considerable note, especially for cattle and hogs, as will appear by the following figures, taken from the books of the rail road company at this place, showing an aggregate for one year, ending November 1st, 1865:

There are organizations, known as "The Sons of Temperance," "Order of Good Templars," and "Independent Order of Odd Fellows," all in a prosperous and flourishing condition. Also, 4 church organizations, viz: "Methodist Episcopal," "United Bretheren," "Christian," and "Presbyterian." The public schools are not in a prosperous condition at present for want of a suitable building; there is, however, a tax levied, and to be levied for a union graded school building, which is to be erected next summer, sufficiently commodious to relieve the present and future wants. The surrounding country is of the first quality prairie, sufficiently undulating and of great fertility, is being rapidly settled by an industrious and thriving class of farmers; gradually increasing the business of the town. The first settlement of this section of the county was made about 35 years ago, along the timber and stream known as the "Mackinaw." The original town of Lexington was laid out shortly after the first settlement of the "Mackinaw," but for want of an outlet for the products of the soil, it remained only in name until the building and opening of the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis Rail Road, in 1854, when it began to improve, and all that is worthy the name of a town has since been built; the improvements this year are large and praiseworthy.

The following number of business houses will give some idea of the trade at this point, viz:

three wagon and plow shops; one carriage shop; three harness and saddle shops; three boot and shoemakers' shops; one notion and variety store; Store; one book and stationary store; one watch and jewelery store; one millinery store; one merchant tailor; one photograph gallery; two corn broom factories; one bank; two insurance claim and land agents; two grain warehouses.

A very good idea of the capital invested, and business done in the cattle brokerage and grain trade, can be had by reference to the statistics given of the shipment of cattle, hogs, and grain.

Martin Township

Is in the third tier of townships from the north, and the second west of the eastern boundary. There is some timber in the north-eastern part of the township; Mackinaw Creek runs through the northern portion. All the cereals are raised in abundance, corn being the staple. There are three schools in the township. Population, 422. No postoffice.

Money Creek Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the north, and the fourth from the eastern boundary. About one-third of the whole is timber, the remainder being generally good farming land. It is well watered by Mackinaw Creek running through the northern, and Money Creek through the western portion. Corn is raised chiefly, but nearly all the cereals and root crops can be successfully cultivated. There is one saw mill and seven schools in the township. Population, 929.

Mosquito Grove Township

Is in the western tier of townships, and the second from the southern boundary. There is little timber in the township, most of it being good prairie land, and sufficiently rolling. It is watered by the two Sugar Creeks; corn, wheat, and oats are raised largely, corn being the staple product. There are several schools in the township. Population, 923. No postoffice.

Mount Hope Township

Is in the southern tier of townships, on the western boundary of the county. The surface is gently rolling, and the township is well settled and improved. The principal productions are corn, wheat, barley, rye, oats, and considerable flax; vegetables of all kinds are grown in abundance. There is little timber in the township, not to exceed one-twentieth part of the whole. Sugar Creek runs through the township, which is also watered by numerous smaller streams. There is one flour mill on Sugar Creek. There are three churches in the township—Methodist, Baptist, and Congregational—all at McLean, and four school districts, in all of which school is taught, three at McLean and one at Mount Hope, two miles distant.

The first settlers in the township were Philip Cline and Squire Johnston, in 1830, since removed. Thomas McFarland in 1838, still living in the township, and Samuel J. Chapin, soon after. The first church organized was the Congregational in 1840, Rev. Levi Spencer, first pastor. The township was first settled principally by a colony from the east, mostly citizens of Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Population, 1,347.

McLean, Mt. Hope township, is a flourishing town on the C. A. & St. L. R. R., 15½ miles south-west of Bloomington, with a population of about 500. It contains three churches—Congregational, Methodist Episcopal and Baptist, and one lodge of Good Templars. There are three good schools in the place, viz.: a select high school and two good primary schools. It contains also four general stores, two drug stores, one harness shop, one tin and stove shop, one restaurant, one buggy and wagonmaker, two blacksmith's shops, one milliner shop, three large grain warehouses, and three practising physicians. Quite a large amount of business is done for the size of the place, the sales of two firms amounting to $25,000 for the year past. McLean is an important grain depot, and shipments have been made to the extent of 150,000 bus. for the current year. The first settler, now living in the town , was Gardener S. Wheelock, who came to the place in 1855, Mr. Kellogg came in 1856 or '57, Messrs. Weed and Toms, of Bloomington, were first owners of the land on which the village was located, and in 1855 put up the station building, which they sold to the I. C. R. R. Co. the following year.

The first house erected for business purposes, was by L. B. Goodhue, who also occupied it as a dwelling. He kept the first store, was first station agent and postmaster, and kept the mail for some time in his child's cradle until the business of the office increasing he transferred it to his hat.

The first church organized was probably the United Brethren in 1856. A large steam flouring mill and grain elevator is now being erected by Mr. Wheelock, which will shortly be in operation. A woolen factory would do well at this point, as sheep raising is becoming much more general, and bids fair to become an important branch of farming in the township.

Normal Township

Is in the third tier of townships from the south, and the third east of the western boundary of the county. There is scarcely any timber in the township, which is watered principally by Sugar Creek. The land is gently rolling the soil fertile, and adapted to all kinds of grain and farm products. There are a number of fine orchards and nurseries in the township, and fruit is extensively grown. There are two universities, the State Normal school and seven public schools in the township. Population, 2,024.

Normal is a post village at the junction of the Ill. Cen. & C. A. and St. L. R. R., 1½ miles from Bloomington.

Old Town Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the south, and the fourth west of the eastern boundary. It is one of the heaviest timbered townships in the county, nearly one-third of the whole area being timbered land, and the remainder a good farming country, principally rolling prairie. It is watered by the Kickapoo Creek and its tributaries. Corn is raised chiefly, though the other grain crops are cultivated to a considerable extent. There are seven schools in the township. Population, 925.

Padua Township

Is in the third tier of townships from the east, and in the second from the southern boundary of the county. It is about one-third timber, and the remainder good prairie lands, well watered by Sangamon Creek, Money Creek, in the northern part, and other small streams. Soil as good as any in the country, and well adapted to all farm products.

There is a Quaker settlement in his township; there is one church of their sect among them and one general store. There are three churches in all—Baptist, Methodist and Quaker or Friends—in the township. There is a small set tlement named ————, (commonly known as Stumptown,) one mile off the post road, which has two general stores, one saw and grist mill. Population of the township, 1201.

Padua---Is a small post station on the Bloomington and Saybrook stage route, 14 miles from Bloomington.

Randolph Grove Township

Is situated in the southern tier of townships, and the third from the western boundary of the county. The face of the country is generally level, and is about equally divided between timber and prairie. It is watered by the two forks of the Kickapoo Creek and numerous small streams, giving it the character of a well-watered country. Corn is the staple production, with some wheat and other grain. Fruit is raised in adundance, and there are a large number of fine orchards in the township. There are six churches—one Presbyterian, four Methodist and one Baptist. There are also twelve schools in the township, and one flour, and one saw mill. Jesse Funk and Alfred Stringfield, are the oldest settlers, now resident in the township. Population 1688.

Heyworth—Is a small town having a population of about 200, on the Illinois Central Railroad, twelve miles from Bloomington. It has two churches —Methodist and Presbyterian; both own good church buildings. There are two schools, (graded,) two general stores, two harness shops, one drug store, three groceries, three blacksmith shops, two wagon shops, one hay press, two grain warehouses. Walter Carr was the first settler, having lived in the village some 33 years.

Towanda Township

Is in the third tier of townships, and fourth west of the eastern boundary line; it is mostly a prairie township, and it is watered by Money Creek, the soil is rich and well adapted to the raising of all root crops. Corn is the staple, and stock raising is carried on to a considerable extent. Population, 952.

Towanda—Is a considerable village, rapidly improving and increasing in population, in the midst of a well cultivated district, and is situated on the Chicago, Alton an St. Louis R. R., nine miles from Bloomington.

West Township

Is in the southern tier of townships, and in the second west of the eastern boundary line. It is entirely a prairie township; the surface is level, and excellent farming land. The township is watered by the east fork of Sugar Creek and other smaller streams. The principal productions are corn and wheat with some oats and barley. There are four schools in the township. Population, 443. No postoffice.

White Oak Township

Is in the second tier of townships from the north, and the second from the western boundary line. There are only a few acres of timber in the north-east corner of the township. The surface is moderately rolling and the soil is good. Principal products, corn, wheat and all the principal cereal crops. There is one flour and one saw mill, and three schools in the township. Population, 567.

Yates Township

Occupies the north-eastern corner of the county. It is all prairie land, moderately rolling, and the soil is excellent and adapted to all kinds of grain and root crops. There are three schools in the township. Population 370. No postoffice.

IN THE

WAR FOR THE UNION.

SOLDIERS' RECORD.

McLean County sent to the field upwards of 4,000 men. In almost every battle she was represented by some of her "Brave boys in Blue," and many of her noble sons fell in the bloody strife. We might mention Colonels Hogg, McCullough, Captains Harvey, Kellogg, Carson, and others. To show the true patriotism of the people, one congregation in the City of Bloomington alone, sent forth over 250 men and six officers. An old citizen speaking of the departure of these men, says, "it was a solemn yet a lovely sight, to see those young men standing around the altar of the church, bidding good bye to homes and friends, and ready to go forth shoulder to shoulder, to fight, and if need be, to die, for the good Old Union.

Did the world ever see such an army or such soldiers as volunteered in the defence of our dear flag?

Historical Sketch of the "McLean County Regiment."

94th Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

This Regiment was organized under the President's call for 600,000 men, issued in the summer of 1862. It was proposed to raise a regiment entirely from McLean County, which should, in a certain sense, represent it, and which should be called the "McLean County Regiment." The idea was a popular one, and the work was begun with a good deal of enthusiasm. A somewhat noted lawyer volunteered—as colonel; a presiding elder offered himself—as chaplain. Some of the most respected and influential citizens of the county betook themselves to raising companies. The Board of Supervisors munificently voted a special bounty of $50 to each enlisted man, and a splendid set of colors to the Regiment. In some parts of the county there was a struggle to see who should first connect themselves with this favorite organization. In two instances, a father and four sons joined the same company. Old men of sixty dyed their hair and whiskers, and offered themselves to the surgeon. Some, on being rejected at the examination of one company, joined others and renewed the attempt. Others, with physical defects, concealed them, not, as afterward, to obtain a large bounty and be discharged, but because their friends and neighbors had joined, and they wished to be with them. Within a week from the day the matter was fairly begun, 1,200 men were reported. Two full companies, failing to get into this organization, joined other regiments.

The companies being organized, a meeting was held at Bloomington, August 14th, and after the men had ballotted for Lieutenant-Colonel and Major, the Field and Line Officers elected the Staff.

One or two changes were afterwards made, and the organization was completed as follows:—

Co. K, Captain, J. M. Burch; 1st Lieutenant, George Hayes; 2d Lieutenant, W. J. Bowlby.

The Regiment being permitted to rendezvous at Bloomington, the men were dismissed until August 20th, when they were mustered into the service of the United States by Captain Wainwright, and again dismissed until August 25th, when they re-assembled, and, amid a whirlwind of enthusiasm, took the cars for St. Louis.

Here we were put into quarters at Benton Barracks, armed and equipped, and on September 10th took the cars for Rolla, Mo. Thence, on the 16th, we marched for Springfield, which we reached on the 24th, after a long, weary, hot, dusty march, which gave us our first taste of life in the field, and which, owing to our being raw, to the heat, and to the scarcity of water, was probably the most fatigueing march we ever made.

Thus, within six weeks from the time of the formation of the Regiment was first resolved upon, we were organised, armed, equipped, moved nearly 400 miles, and now found ourselves in the face of the enemy, and "eager for the fray."

From this time until November 12th, we were occupied in fortifying Springfield, and taking our first lessons in Battalion drill.

On the above date we broke camp, and after a four days' march, towards all points of the compass, over wretched roads, in a drenching rain, found ourselves at Twin Springs, 12 miles from the point of starting, thus getting our introduction to the highest branch of the art of war—strategy.

While lying here we were brigaded, becoming a part of the 2d Brigade of the 3d Division of the "Army of the Frontier."

At this time the troops in the southwest were divided into three divisions, commanded respectively by Generals Blunt, Totten, and Herron. Gen. Curtis in the telegraph office, at St Louis, nominally commanded the whole, but occasionally the Brigadiers broke loose, as we shall presently see.

In the latter part of November, Gen. Blunt having pushed forward as far as Cane Hill, Ark., found himself confronted by the rebel Gen. Hindman, with a superior force. Some indecisive engagements took place, rather to our advantage. Hindman brought up troops from Little Rock, and all other points within reach, scoured the country for men of all ages, and having collected the whole available force of the southwest, amounting to about 30,000 men of all kinds, suddenly enveloped Blunt, who found himself too weak to risk a battle, and unable to get away without one. Before he was surrounded, however, he sent a message to Gen. Herron, calling for help, while, with his small force, he presented so bold a front that Hindman hesitated to attack him.

Upon receiving this message at noon on the 3d of December, Gen. Herron at once broke camp, and the 2d Division following closely behind, after a forced march of 120 miles in 90 hours, we found ourselves ten miles southwest of Fayetteville, Ark., half-way between that place and Cane Hill, on Sunday morning, December 7th, 1862.

All the cavalry, except a small body, had been pushed on, and joined Blunt the night before. Totten was as close behind us as our lengthy train would allow him to march—from ten to fifteen miles.

Meanwhile, Hindman hovering around Blunt, anxious, yet fearful, to attack him, received news of the coming reinforcements, allowed our cavalry to pass through his lines, and on the night of the 6th, leaving a small force to engage Blunt's attention, swung his main force round upon the road leading from Fayetteville, and took a strong position at Prairie Grove, on the southwest side of Illinois Creek, intending to defeat the force coming up, and then return and finish Blunt at his leisure.

The plan was a good one, and apparently ought to have succeeded, but instead of attacking us upon our march, forcing our advance back upon the rear, and involving us in inextricable confusion, he took up his position, and waited for us to attack him. Perhaps he had not much confidence in his inexperienced troops; perhaps he over-estimated our force; at any rate he put himself upon the defensive and remained so.

A part of the 1st Arkanses Cavalry, which formed our advance guard, ran into the enemy's position about 10 A. M., and were pounced upon, gobbled up and scattered. The fugitives came drifting past our Regiment, which had the advance, hatless, with scratched faces from running through the woods, and telling frightful stories of the enemy's strength and ferocity. I remember a woman the wife of one of the cavalry officers, came back along with the rest, without any bonnet, her hair disheveled, and her dress in ribbons; yet with the volubility of her sex, berating the trembling cavalry-men for running away. "Here's an Illinois Regiment," she cried, as she came past us, "These men won't run away like you poor, cowardly wretches," looking unutterable things at her flying companions.

A halt was ordered, the men threw off their knapsacks and overcoats, and a line was hastily formed across the road. The enemy, however, declining to show himself, our Regiment, with a section of artillery, was pushed forward to develop their force. At this time no one supposed that any thing but a small force was in our front, and it was not thought necessary to wait for the 2d Division to come up. Crossing Illinois Creek about noon, the enemy's cavalry falling back before us, we found their force strongly posted upon a bluff about a mile from the river, with an open field in their front. This field, however, did not extend—at least on our part of the line—to the creek, but enough of brush and small timber intervened to give us a cover to form in.

General Herron's force consisted of six regiments of infantry and four batteries, in all between 4,000 and 5,000 men. The enemy outnumbered us at least five to one. Nevertheless, as fast as the regiments came up they fell into line of battle, the artillery shelled vigorously, and about 2 P. M., our regiment, which held the extreme left, advanced into the field, and delivered the first volley of musketry, immediately receiving one in return.

Victor Hugo has remarked how difficult it is to describe a battle. Like the rain-bow, no two persons see exactly the same thing. What, with the excitement, the smoke, the dust, the uproar and the general whirlwind which seems to envelop the combatants, any general description of the scene is extremely difficult. When to these circumstances, it is added, that we were utterly worn out with three days and nights incessant marching, and unable to stop for a moment, even under the heaviest fire, without going to sleep, any attempt at description of any thing more than what immediately concerns us, may well be excused.

It has been said that our Regiment held the extreme left. Having drawn the enemy's fire, the battle immediately opened along the whole line. Probably no battle during the war, was fought with less change of position than this. From 2 o'clock until dark, the two lines were maintained about as they were first established. It was simply a pounding match. The enemy, lying in the edge of a piece of brown woods that crowned the brow of the hill, kept up an incessant fire of musketry and artillery. Our men, lying at the foot of the hill, on the opposite side of a field, kept up an equally incessant fire of artillery and musketry. There was no massing or charging, or flanking. On our end of the line at least, each regiment acted a good deal as its Colonel saw fit.

Thus it happened, that about three o'clock, the 19th Iowa and 20th Wisconsin upon our right, suddenly left the line, moved out into the open field, and advanced with their guns at a right shoulder, towards a battery on the brow of the hill. As they advanced they gradually swung around to the left, so as to come at most between us and the enemy. Of course they were received with a tremendous fire, but they kept steadily on, until the right of the 20th Wisconsin reached the battery, shot the horses and drove away the gunners. But now they found they had gone too far. A double raking fire was poured in from each side of the battery, under which they hesitated, halted, found themselves unsupported, wavered, broke, and rushed down the hill like a flock of sheep, and, in spite of the efforts of their officers, never halted until entirely off the field on the north side of the creek. A few of the 19th Iowa halted on the line, and formed on our right flank, but most of the fourteen hundred men who a few moments before marched so bravely up the hill, were either mangled and writhing upon its slope, or scattered fugitives in the woods at the rear. The responsibility for this insane movement, by which one-third of our entire loss was incurred, has never been fairly fixed upon any one. The 20th went up because they thought that was the order. The 19th went up because they saw the 20th going. Never was the want of a head so painfully apparent.

The loss of these two regiments made a gap in our line, and we were left, together with Foust's Battery, cut off from the rest, and forming a sort of independent corps. There was no reserve to fill the gap with, and we did not dare to leave our position for fear of being out-flanked. What was still worse, the road to our rear lay directly in the gap. Could the enemy once drive our Regiment back or break through that gap, nothing could save us. Aware of this, Hindman massed an overwhelming force in our front, and made desperate efforts to overpower us. In spite of all their officers could do, however, their men could not be brought to encounter the withering storm of musketry and grape which met them whenever they left their cover.

Again and again they dashed down to the opposite edge of the field, but nothing could induce them to advance farther. Occasionally, squads of men more desperate than the rest, would leap the fence and make a push for our line, but they melted away, shot down one after another, the last one sometimes within a few rods of where we lay.

The battle raged furiously along the whole line. Every available man was engaged. We were obliged to fight it out for ourselves. No troops could be spared to come to our help, and there was nothing to fall back upon. In our front was an enemy, outnumbering us perhaps ten to one, and threatening every moment to sweep us off the field. If we wavered the battle was lost.

It was a critical hour. Lieut. Col. McNulta, in command of the Regiment, rode back and forward along the line amid a perfect hurricane of balls, calling on his comrades to stand by their colors to the last. He was ably seconded by Major Laughlin. The Chaplain, forgetting his peaceful calling, could be heard as he reloaded his piece, exhorting his brethren to "trust in God and fire low." Captains and Lieutenants, caught up the guns of the fallen, and fought side by side with their men. Every man did his duty like a hero. They held the issue of the battle in their hands and they knew it. Pressed by the whole right wing of the enemy, the Regiment stood like a rock.

This sort of conflict could not last always. The ammunition was giving out, cartridges were passed from one to another, and the men were ordered to make every shot tell. All but two of Foust's guns had fallen back for want of ammunition. It was nearly sunset, yet it was doubtful if we could hold out until night put an end to the battle.

Just at this darkest hour, when men were beginning to look in each other's faces, and shake their heads, from away towards the setting sun on our right, came the long, crackling roll that told of vollies of musketry in that direction. Faint at first, but gradually growing more distinct, for a little while amid the tumult it was unnoticed, but as it swelled louder and nearer, one Regiment after another took up the cry of "Blunt, Blunt!" and cheer after cheer welcomed the joyful news, and sent new life into our doubtful and almost despairing ranks. It was indeed Blunt, who, at the first sound of the battle had broken through the slender line left to oppose him, and crowding his men on by the shortest road, now struck the enemy on their left, rolling it up and sending confusion and dismay through their motley ranks.

This decided the battle. The enemy hastily withdrew a portion of the troops in our front, and hurried them over to oppose the new arrival, and though a steady fire was kept up until darkness closed the scene, yet the immense pressure to which we had been subjected, was taken off, and we maintained our ground without difficulty.

Blunt came not a moment too soon. Men were becoming discouraged as the overwhelming force of the enemy became more and more apparent. A steady stream of demoralized and disheartened men was setting back towards the ford, and the woods at the rear were filled with skulkers—not from our Regiment however. We were to all intents beaten. The natural result of the reckless management that hurled five thousand men against five times their number, was becoming apparent. From the moment the firing was heard on our right, all this was changed. Men drifting back past the ford, with that peculiar, sullen, dejected, reckless air, only to be seen in a defeated soldier, stopped short upon the bank, listened, hesitated, turned round, listened again, and then suddenly set off towards the field, their heads thrown up, like a hound when he scents his game, and looking like another set of beings. The colors of the 20th Wisconsin were brought forward, and men flocked towards them. The two broken regiments were in a great measure rallied, or rather rallied themselves. Knots of men emerged from the woods, dashed through the creek, cheering vociferously, and calling stragglers to come on, declaring that they had been to the rear for ammunition. On the field, men grasped each other by the hand and flung their caps in the air, and behaved as only men can who have been unexpectly saved from imminent danger.

Half an hour later, all would have been over. The 94th would have been obliged to fall back, our left flank would have been turned, our rear exposed, our trains captured, and nothing could have saved us from utter ruin. As it was, nothing but the steady courage of our Regiment saved the day, and held the balance even, until Blunt's opportune arrival snatched victory from the very jaws of defeat.

I have been thus minute in describing this battle, because it was the only heavy engagement in the open field in which we took part, and because proper credit has never been given to the McLean County Regiment for their share in the action. That the action was a victory instead of a defeat, was entirely owing to the steady courage with which they held their position.

The troops bivouacked upon the spot they had so manfully held, and waited impatiently for the dawn to secure the victory, now evidently within their grasp. During the night, however, the enemy, abandoning a part of his train, took the oxen to draw off his artillery, and stripping the slain of their blankets to wrap round the wheels, silently retreated towards Van Buren, a shattered, demoralized force, which was never brought together again in any considerable number until nearly two years later, when they met General Banks at Sabine cross-roads. Nothing could exceed our surprise the next day, upon finding that after being exposed to so heavy a fire for so many hours, our total loss was only one killed and twenty-six wounded.

This may require a word of explanation. It has been before remarked that no maneuver took place upon the open field. The regiment was at no time more than a quarter of a mile from where the first volley was fired. The enemy's fire was uniformally directed down hill, in consequence of which they almost always overshot. Again, Col. McNulta had been careful to drill his men in firing while lying down, and the first order when we occasionally took a new position, was "down," and the Colonel, riding back and forward, took care that the men should stay down. Now, if you undertake to hit a man say two hundred yards off, down hill, in the smoke and excitement of battle, you will find it difficult enough, if he stands up, but when he lies down, with his head toward you, it becomes almost impossible. When you add to this, that every advantage was taken of depression of ground, trees, logs and fences, to which the men adapted themselves, as only Western hunters can, our small loss is easily explained.

Removing the wounded to Fayetteville, we lay in camp in the beautiful valley where the battle took place, until Dec. 27th, when Blunt and Herron having planned a raid to VanBuren, forty odd miles distant, we broke camp and were soon struggling up the steeps of the Boston mountains. All day and nearly all night we toiled, dragging the artillery up with ropes, and wading ice cold streams, until at three o'clock next morning, we sank down by the road-side utterly exhausted. At dawn we were on our way again, pouring down the southern slope of the mountain, at 3 P. M., drove in the pickets with our advance of cavalry, and dashed into the town. But little resistance was made. They had evidently expected something of the kind, at their artillery and valuable stores had been taken across the river to a place of safety, and but a small force garrisoned the town. This fled as our approach, and we took possession of the place with three steamers, several well-filled hospitals, a quantity of forage, and the telegraph office with important dispatches.

On the 29th, it was thought advisable to create an impression upon the inhabitants, by parading our whole force through the streets. It has never fallen to my lot to witness a more magnificent spectacle than this display. The day was clear and bright; the troops in high spirits and looked their best. The town itself is romantically situated on a sloping bluff of the Arkansas River, containing many beautiful residences, and, at that time showing none of the melancholy signs of warfare to which our eyes had been accustomed. No lonely chimneys and blackened ruins spoke eloquently and mournfully of happy homes devastated, and happy circles broken forever, but all looked bright and peaceful as one of our own villages at home. The inhabitants kept sullenly within doors, though curious eyes peered from behind every curtain, and young lieutenants held their head none the less erect, and flourished their swords none the less gracefully because no fair lady was herself visible at the door. Cautiously jubilant darkies thronged upon the corners, (the younger ones standing on their heads on the gate-posts in excess of delight,) exchanging friendly badinage with the troops, or commenting with glistening teeth, upon their appearance.

Cavalry, infantry, and artillery, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Arkansas troops, "Kansas Jayhawkers and Pin Indians," (as Hindman had called them in his address to his troops, some time before,) poured down into the town from their camps on the bluff, and moved by the main street down a gentle slope to the river. To one standing upon the bluff at the rear of the town the scene was inspiring. With bands playing, drums beating and banners waving, regiment after regiment swept down the street, while thousands of voices rose in unison, and the thrilling notes of "Rally round the Flag," floated up against the bluffs, and filled the whole heavens with their quivering echoes. Our regiment made an especially fine display, as it moved at open order, the men carrying their guns horizontally across behind their necks, and with both arms extended, filling the whole street with level lines of glistening steel.

After an hour's rest on the bank of the river, we moved back to our camps. The captured forage was destroyed. Such ammunition and public property as could be transported, was loaded upon the few wagons attainable. The steamers were stripped and burned, and at daybreak we were again on our way to our camp at Prairie Grove, which we reached on New Year's eve. On this march occurred the distressing accident by which Captain Joseph P. Orme, of Co. "H," lost his life. A man carrying his gun carelessly, it caught upon a twig and shot the Captain through the lungs. When told that his wound was mortal, he remarked, "My only regret is, that I do not die on the field of battle." This mournful event threw a shadow upon our triumph, and dampened, somewhat, our New Year's rejoicings.

On the 2nd of January, 1863, we moved up to Fayetteville, whence, after being reviewed by General Schofield, who had now assumed command, we began a long, devious, tedious march by way of Huntsville, Carrollton, Forsythe, and Mountain Grove, through rain, snow, mud and sleet, with numerous stopping places, and long detours after forage, until on the last day of March, we reached Lake Spring, twelve miles from Rolla, having been three months in marching the same distance we had traversed in the fall, in a week.

About the time we left Fayetteville, Marmaduke, who seemed to be the most enterprising of their generals, having collected a considerable body of cavalry from the wreck of Hindman's army, made a detour round our flank, and on the 6th of January, 1863, suddenly appeared before the defences of Springfield and demanded its surrender. The garrison was very small, but there were a great many sick in the hospitals, among whom were about sixty of our Regiment. The convalescents were armed and put into the forts, and after a severe engagement, the enemy were fairly beaten off, to the great disgust of several hundred of the inhabitants along Marmaduke's road, who had flocked after him in the confident belief that the place would be given up to them to plunder. In this engagement, one of our men, Briggs, of Co. "K," was killed, and two others wounded. During the three months we spent on the march to Lake Spring, we were a good deal out of civilization. Constantly on the move, first in one direction and then in another; we got our rations occasionally, and our mails semi-occasionally. In lieu of news, however, we had plenty of rumors about what was going on in all parts of the country.

I reproduce from my journal of those times, a list of the rumors that reached us in one day, which will serve to remind my comrades of some of the topics which served to while away the time as we shivered over our smoky fires, on that desolate march.

1—Vicksburg has surrendered. 2—It hasn't. 3—Lincoln has given the rebels one hundred days to repent. 4—He hasn't. 5—Marmaduke has captured Springfield. 6—He has burned it and murdered all the sick in the hospitals. 7—He is retreating. 8—He has burned a train between Springfield and Rolla. 9—He was met at Ozark by Brown and driven back. 10—He is coming down the road from Springfield, to Fayetteville, burning every thing he comes to. 11—He has come down as far as Elkhart, and then struck west towards the Nation. 12—He has passed down 20 miles east of us. 13—He has passed 10 miles behind us. 14—He is right ahead of us with 6,000 men. 15—His force was completely dispersed by Brown before Warren could get up to him. 16—Our men have captured some saltpetre works, with 48 prisoners; 17—44. 18—38. 18—35. 20—Marmaduke whipped Brown and pushed within 6 miles of Springfield, when the sick came out and thrashed him. 21—Brown thrashed Marmaduke, and the latter running away, ran into Warren's force, which captured him with all his men. 22—A paymaster is close behind us with fourteen kegs of specie to pay us off with! (which was for a long time the stereotyped answer to the inquiry "what's the news."

During the month of February, from fatigue and exposure in the snow and mud, a very fatal pneumonia made its appearance, which in four weeks swept off seventeen of our men.

About that time we reached Lake Spring, when Col. Orme was promoted to the rank of Brigadier General. After a few months service in that part of the country, he resigned the honor for the position of Treasury Agent. McNulta and Laughlin were now advanced a grade higher each, and Captain Briscoe of Co. "A," was appointed Major, and Sargeant A. L. Haywood of Co. K, was promoted to that of adjutant.

At Lake Spring we lay until June 3d, recuperating, drilling, and having a general good time. Our wives and friends came down to see us with baskets full of goodies, and general hilarity prevailed. Meantime Grant was pounding at the gates of Vicksburg, and, as our boys were fond of expressing it, "finding he couldn't take it without the 94th," sent for us accordingly. Bidding adieu to our luxurious life at Lake Spring, we took the cars at Rolla for St. Louis, and then by the steamer Minnehaha for Vicksburg.

Arriving before this "Gibraltar of the West," on the 13th of June, we were posted on the left of the line below the city, and from that time until the surrender of the place, we played our part in the investment, digging ditches, planting guns, making gabions, capturing rifle-pits, dodging shells, exchanging knives and pipes with the enemy during temporary local truces, and shot shell at other times, and experiencing all the dangers and fatigues, excitement and an anxiety attending a siege. Although we bore our full share of the danger and exposure, yet owing to the sleepless care of Col. McNulta in not allowing the men to needlessly expose themselves, we lost but one man killed, and five wounded.

On the memorable 4th of July, 1863, we entered in triumph, over the works that had so long held us at bay, and watched with throbbing hearts, the old flag go up on the court house, amid the thunder of the guns from the fleet, and the tumult of general rejoicing.

On the 11th of July, we took part in an expedition to Yazoo City. After taking possession of this place, we made a weary, dusty, sultry march in the direction of Black River, and returned without accomplishing anything, so far as we ever knew. While upon this march, we saw the only really good country we ever had the fortune to find in the south during our service.

Returning on the 21st to Vicksburg, we were shipped again on the 24th to Port Hudson, at which desolate place we lay, with a most miserable camping ground, bad water, and under a broiling sun, until August 13th, when we were shipped to Carrollton, 6 miles above New Orleans. Here the fatigue and exposure, to which we had been for two months subjected, began to tell heavily upon the health of the men, and, although we had good camping ground, and were, in most respects, favorably located, the hospitals rapidly filled up, and almost one-half our men were reported on the sick list. During our stay here, we were attached to the 13th Army Corps, and took part in a grand review held by Gens. Banks and Grant, the latter saying as we marched by, "I never saw a better appearing or better moving regiment, either volunteers or regulars in my life," which we took to be our praise from a man who does not usually express either praise or censure unless it is deserved.

On the 5th September, an expedition to Morganza being determined upon, the steamer Sally Robinson took us up to that point, from which we made a reconnoisance in force in the neighborhood of the Atchafaylaya River, waked up quite a force of rebels, received a brisk shelling, and returned without having ascertained any thing, except that there was a force of the enemy out there—and that we knew before.

While lying at Morganza, Cary, of Co. "D," an ambulance driver, was captured by the rebels, and carried into the interior of Texas, (to Tyler, I believe,) where he was kept for several months, when he made his escape, and, after suffering great hardships, made his way to the Mississippi, where he was picked up by one of our gun-boats. This, I believe, was the only man we had taken prisoner during our term of service.

Our sick having been left at Carrollton, we returned thither on the 11th of October, and soon after began to prepare for the expedition to the coast of Texas, which was at this time in contemplation.

On the 25th October, every thing being in readiness, we embarked, and were soon tasting the sweets of an ocean voyage, in a crowded vessel in bad weather.

After an exceedingly tempestuous voyage, we made Brazos Santiago on the 3d November, and, having with great difficulty effected a landing through the surf by the 5th, very ungallantly outmarched the regiments landed before us, and splashing through a pouring rain, took possession of Brownsville on the 6th without meeting with any serious opposition.

Upon this fag end of creation we were doomed to lie inactive for nearly nine months, without threatening any body, or any body threatening us. Simply holding the post, and—getting the scurvy.

Only once was the tedium relieved by a speck of war. Our neighbors, the Mexicans, being engaged in one of their customary free fights in Matamoras, and the American Consul, expressing some fears as to his safety if either party beat the other, our regiment and another were sent across by Gen. Dana, to see fair play. Accordingly, one evening we carried our flag upon foreign soil, marched up into the town, bivouacked in the streets near the Consul's residence, and amused ourselves by watching the Mexican style of fighting. Judging from what we saw, it is no wonder they make so feeble a resistance to the French, or any one else that fight in earnest.

Like the Chinese, they seemed to rely more upon the noise they could make, than upon the damage they could do. There was no organization, no plan, no attack, no defence, no co-operation, nothing which one looks for even in a street fight in a civilized country, except yelling and gunpowder. Squads of men flitted about the streets, shouting rallying cries, and occasionally firing a scattering volley, sometimes in one direction, and sometimes in the other. Generally however, each man was his own officer, and his own army. The favorite mode of procedure seemed to be, to load your gun in some dark alley, slip up to the plaza, stick your gun round the corner of a house and blaze away. If no one was in sight, they fired all the same, the main objects seeming to be to keep out of danger, to fire off their guns as often as possible, and to yell as loudly and frequently as their lungs would allow.

After a night spent in watching their manœuvres, and occasionally dodging a stray ball coming our way, we left them to fight it out and escorted the Consul to our own side of the river.

The above description will give an idea of the Mexican infantry. The only artillery in the "Heroic city of Matamoras," as they delight to call it, consisted of half a dozen old six-pounders much less dangerous to an enemy than to their artillerymen, a matter which they compromised by having no artillerymen to endanger. As to their cavalry, I need only say that upon the occasion of a Grand Review upon our side of the river, the celebrated Cortinas (an ignorant and blood-thirsty guerilla who cannot write his own name,) came across with an escort composed of the flower of their lancers, several of whose horses broke down in attempting to gallop after the General down our line, and had to be led and pushed and beaten back to the ferry.

At Brownsville we were employed in building an ice-house which never had any ice in it; in cultivating a Post Garden which never furnished enough vegetables to supply the Post Commander's table, and in building a fort, part of whose walls fell down when we fired a Fourth of July salute.

In the month of July, 1864, the operation of Gen. Grant's plan of consolidation reached us, and we evacuated the place on the 25th, amid the cheers of the rebels on the other side of the river, the lamentations of the billiard-markers, the tears of the beer-women and the offer of green-backs for specie, at three for one, with no takers.

After a smooth passage, we reached New Orleans, August 4th, and were at once ordered to report to Gen. Granger at Mobile Bay. Taking boat we arrived just in time to receive the last shot fired from Fort Gaines, before it surrendered.

Landing at Navy Cove, we at once began the siege of Fort Morgan. Burrowing in the sand, we pushed our lines steadily up, without casualty, until the terrific bombardment of the 21st gave that stronghold, a smoking ruin, into our hands.

We now pitched our tents, as best we might, upon the sand-hills about the fort, and sat down to pass another season of inaction.

During our stay in Texas, owing to our being almost entirely deprived of vegetables, scurvy had made its appearance, to a very serious extent, and, not faring much better here, we were in a fair way of becoming a part of the "Invalid Corps," when the good people of McLean County, incited thereto by Osborne Barnard, formerly a Lieutenant in Company "I," sent us an immense lot of vegetables, Mr. Barnard coming with them to make sure of our getting them.

Upon this supply, so welcome and so timely, we rapidly improved, so that by the middle of December, we were ready to take part in the expedition to East Pascagoula, undertaken at this time to deceive the enemy into the belief that we were going to attack the city from the west side.

On the 22d of December, being then at Franklin Creek, a few miles back from Pascagoula, we had a brisk skirmish with a body of the enemy who had come down to look after us, but no one was hurt belonging to our Regiment.

We spent our holidays here, in the pine woods, growing so black with the pitchy smoke that there was considerable fear that we would be transferred to the Corps d'Afrique, and be known as "smoked Yankees" to the end of the war.

The time dragged on rather slowly until February 1st, when, the enemy being supposed to be sufficiently mystified, we evacuated the place, and returned to our old camp at Fort Morgan.

Troops now began to pour in from all quarters. A large force, principally of cavalry, was concentrated at Pensacola to be ready to move towards the rear of Mobile. Gen. Steele was assigned to this command. Gen. Smith with his corps came down from Nashville, all available troops were withdrawn from Texas and Louisiana. Gen. Canby took the field in person, and every thing pointed to a speedy movement against Mobile.

The 13th Army Corps, which had been temporarily broken up, was re-organized, with Gen. Granger in command. The troops were re-brigaded, and we became a part of the 1st Brigade of the 2d Division. The other two brigades of which the Division consisted, being at Pensacola, with Gen. C. C. Andrews in command, left us as a detached and independent brigade commanded by Col. Bertram of the 20th Wisconsin, who reported directly to Gen. Granger.

Owing to what were probably unavoidable delays, we remained at Mobile Point organizing, equipping etc., until March 17th, when we broke up our camp, and moved up the east side of the bay. At the same time a force was thrown across to Cedar Point on the west side of the bay, the gun-boats moved up and engaged the forts below the city, and Gen. Steele moved out to threaten their rear. Thus four distinct movements were made against the place simultaneously, and the enemy was left to guess which was the real one.

Our march led us up the eastern shore of the bay over a very level country heavily timbered with pine, from which turpentine had been extensively manufactured. Heavy rains prevailed, and though it was not cold, yet every man soon became, as Mr. Mantilini expresses it, "a dem'd moist unpleasant body." An Englishman classified American roads as "bad, indifferent, and none at all." This road would come under the third class. Our Brigade had the advance, and, consequently, the pioneer work fell upon us. Every man became a Commissioner of Roads and Highways; they worked night and day; each man was expected to carry his knapsack, gun, ammunition, a spade and an axe, (in the 7th Vermont a box of paper collars was added,) and thus lightly equipped, to build from 10 to 20 miles of corduroy road, to bridge several streams, to drag the artillery over the road by hand, "and then," as an Irishman in Co. "B" expressed it, "to march over it themselves." Our trains fell behind of course. Alligator steak became common and shoe-soup was spoken of before we reached Fish River, where we found Smith's corps, and the force which had made a feint upon Cedar Point. These troops had been transported up the bay on steamers, while we were floundering through the water and bogs over land. Here the enemy's pickets began to annoy us, but fell back when we began our advance on the 25th of March. Our Brigade again took the advance up the edge of the bay, while the main force moved up a road more interior, but being within supporting distance. Great caution was observed; the troops moved with skirmishers in front and frequently fell into line of battle across the road. Here, too, we did what had never before been deemed necessary upon a march,—built breast-works when we stopped at night. Each company was ordered to throw up in their front, a work of logs and earth sufficient to afford ample protection in case of an attack. The scene, as the weary men flitted about among the ghostly pines, and toiled at their works by the light of flaring torches, was very striking and picturesque.

On the 26th we struck the lowest point of Spanish Fort. This work consisted of a chain of redoubts, connected by a strong breast-work, stretching about a mile and three quarters up the bay, and enclosing two strong earth-works, Battery Alexis, at the south end of the chain, in our immediate front; and Spanish Fort proper, which was mainly intended for defence against the fleet. Besides the usual rifle pits in front of the fort, the abattis, the felled woods, etc., the enemy had adopted the further annoyance of torpedoes thickly planted in the roads and along the streams, for two or three miles out. Although but a dozen men were killed by these infernal contrivances, yet they were a source of very considerable annoyance, and the occasion of much objurgation among the men, who could never feel themselves safe, not knowing but that the next step might be the cause of an explosion which might tear them to pieces.

At Spanish Fort, as at Vicksburg, we held the extreme left of the line, opposite Battery Alexis, the rest of the troops enveloping the line of works, and a portion pushing on to Blakely, six miles further up, where Steele had already began a siege. Our camp was pitched within a mile of the fort, behind a friendly hill, and the siege began. Lines were begun, parallels opened, traverses pushed out, rifle pits captured, and all the excitement, labor and dangers of a siege undergone.

The enemy made a brisk defence, and although their comparatively small force, prevented their offering any great obstacle to our steady approach, they kept up a musketry fire from their rifle pits, the most searching that we had experienced. As the men expressed it, "they shot to kill." Their firing was not so heavy as we had encountered, but better directed. Not a head or an arm could be displayed above our lines without becoming a target for some good marksman.

Here again, justice requires that I should make mention of the manner in which Col. McNulta handled the Regiment. Day and night, when we were on duty, he watched the enemy and his own men with sleepless vigilance. Utterly reckless in exposing his own person, he yet sternly forbade any other man exposing himself unnecessarily or imprudently, and so closely did he watch, and so well did he manage, that, although the men were in the front pits every alternate 24 hours, and exposed to a scathing fire of musketry, artillery and mortars, for thirteen days, while regiments immediately beside us, and exposed no more than ourselves, lost from ten to twenty-five men each, we came through with a loss of only one killed and three wounded. A better illustration of the value of a prudent and watchful commanding officer, could not well be furnished.

On the 4th of April, fifty-six guns and mortars having been brought to bear upon the fort, a bombardment of a most terrific character was begun and kept up for three hours. This failing to drive the enemy out, the vice was tightened and the fort was drawn closer and closer in the deadly grip we had fastened upon it. Our men suffering severely from shells dropped into our rifle pits by small cohorn mortars, improvised some of their own to reply with. A tough piece of gum log was selected, properly hollowed out, banded with strong iron bands and mounted on a slab. Four men could carry it along the pit, and it would throw a six pound shell from one hundred to two hundred yards with considerable accuracy. Dozens of these "Fighting Quakers" were in use before the siege closed.

On the evening of the 8th April, the bombardment was repeated, and under cover of the fire, Smith's corps broke through the enemy's line on the extreme right, about dark. Instead of pushing down towards our end of the fort, by which they might have captured the entire garrison, they halted, and threw up breastworks inside of the enemy's line, not advancing until 11 o'clock at night. In the mean time, the garrison had spiked their guns, and leaving their rifle-pits still manned by a slender line, escaped under cover of the darkness to Battery Huger, and thence to Mobile.

It was nearly midnight when this was discovered at our end of the line, and our Regiment at once rushed forward, cleaning out the rifle pits, and pushing on in the darkness, over abattis, torpedoes and ditches, found themselves in possession of Fort Alexis, upon which they immediately planted the first Union flag that floated over our end of the line. Daylight revealed our prize to be a strong fort mounting seven guns. The whole work mounted 29 guns and 17 mortars.

This finished our service against the enemy, as it also finished the war. Blakely fell by assault the next day, and Mobile surrendered two days after, being the last stronghold of the rebellion. After holding Battery Alexis for 24 hours, we were placed in charge of a large lot of prisoners, and conducted them by steamers to Ship Island, where we turned them over to the watchful care of some colored troops. Here we received the first intelligence of the surrender of Lee and the virtual collapse of the Confederacy.

Returning to Spanish Fort on the 17th April, our Brigade was put in charge of the place with orders to remove the guns and dismantle the forts, including Forts Huger and Tracy. Shortly after, the rest of the Brigade removed to Blakely, and we continued the work alone, until May 7th, when, having completed it, we were transferred to the western side, and went into camp three miles below the city on the shore of the bay.

Here we lay wearily, expecting every day to be mustered out, when just as we thought we were safe, we were suddenly ordered off to the coast of Texas. Embarking on the 18th June, we steamed to Galveston, where we lay without any special incident until July 17th, when we were partially mustered out, and on the 20th started for home.

Stopping one day in New Orleans, we reached Camp Butler on the 2d of August, and on August 9th, 1865, having served just three years, having seen the great rebellion utterly crushed, having marched 1,200 miles, traveled by railroad 610 miles, and by steamer nearly 6,000 miles, having campaigned in six States, having taken part in nine battles, sieges and skirmishes, having never been repulsed or defeated, and having in all cases "quitted ourselves like men," we returned to our families with hearts full of gratitude to the Giver of all good, who had given us victory and peace, and preserved our lives to see our country once more united and glorious, and our countrymen liberty-loving and patriotic.

Historical Sketch of the "Thirty-Third Regiment."

The Thirty-third Illinois Regiment was raised in the summer of 1861, under the first call for three hundred thousand men. It was raised mainly by the exertions of its first Colonel, Charles E. Hovey, then President of the Illinois State Normal University, assisted by other educational men of various parts of the State; the nucleus of the Regiment being the Normal Company, composed of students of the University, of which Col. Hovey was captain, and which, under Prof. Potter as its commander, became Co. A of the Normal Regiment. Co. C, raised by Dr. Roe, in McLean County, took the preliminary oath of enlistment at Bloomington, on the 15th of August, and was mustered in at Camp Butler on the 22d; the other companies date their organization within a few days of the same time.

The Regiment remained at Camp Butler until Sept. 19th, when it proceeded to Arcadia on the Iron Mountain Railroad in Missouri, then a frontier post. While stationed there, three of the companies which were guarding bridges higher up the road were attacked by part of Jeff Thompson's forces, about Oct. 14th, and a considerable portion of two companies taken prisoners, including Captain Elliott of Co. E., the last Colonel of the Regiment.

On the 21st, the remainder of the Regiment participated in the battle of Fredericktown, Mo., in which Jeff Thompson and Col. Lowe, commanding the rebel forces, were utterly routed with heavy loss, and Col. Lowe was killed.

On March 1st, 1862, the Regiment marched southward with Gen. Steele; and joined the main army of Gen. Curtis at Batesville, Ark. From this point it accompanied that army down the White River valley early in the summer. On July 7th, being in the advance, the Regiment with a portion of the 11th Wisconsin and 1st Indiana Cavalry fought the battle of Cache Bayou, defeating a heavy force of Rusk's Texas Rangers. The army expected to meet the gunboats at Clarendon to receive supplies, but did not arrive there until the boats had left, and were compelled to make a forced march of fifty miles to Helena on the Mississippi, where it arrived July 14th.

During the rest of the summer of 1862, the Regiment lay at Helena. In March, 1863, the Regiment embarked at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., for the Vicksburg campaign; landed at Milliken's Bend, La., and became a part of the 13th Corps, under the leadership of Major General McClernand; Gen. Carr commanding the Division, and Gen. Benton, of Indiana, the Brigade. They participated fully in the dangers, hardships, and glories of that magnificent campaign; shared in the battles of Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, the deadly assault on Vicksburg of May 22d, and the long, arduous siege which terminated so gloriously on the 4th July in the surrender of the rebel stronghold and its garrison of over 30,000 men, with hundreds of cannon and untold quantities of small arms and ammunition.

Without waiting to share the rejoicings over their triumph, the Regiment marched on the morning of the 5th with Sherman's army upon Jackson, the State Capital, in the siege and capture of which they were actively engaged. Returning to Vicksburg, the Regiment, with most of the 13th Corps, was transferred to New Orleans about August 19th. During the fall it participated in General Banks' expedition up the Teche as far as Opelousas, then returned to New Orleans, and on November the 15th embarked for the coast of Texas. Arriving at Matagorda Bay, under fire, on Nov. 27th, the attack was opened immediately, and before daylight of the 30th, a reconnoitering party of the 33d entered the fort, found it deserted and on fire, and planted the national flag on its walls.

In January, 1864, the Regiment re-enlisted in the Veteran Service for three years longer, (being then at Indianola, Texas,) and started home on veteran furlough. Detained for more than a month in New Orleans, awaiting payment, they finally reached Bloomington on March 14th, and met with such a welcome from the people as will never be forgotten by the veterans, while memory retains her sway. Returning in April to New Orleans, the Regiment was sent to Brashear City, and from thence scattered along the Opelousas Railroad as bridge and station guards; in which employment nearly a year passed away.

In February, 1865, the Regiment was assigned to A. J. Smith's Veteran 16th Corps, and ordered to the Mobile expedition. It was when just starting to New Orleans to join this command, that the 33d met with the terrible railroad accident, (March 2d,) which was fully chronicled in our papers at the time, and which resulted in the death of eleven men, and the more or less severe injury of some seventy others. This delayed the departure of the Regiment for several days, but did not defeat it altogether; and on March 18th it embarked for Mobile. Marching upon that city with the main army by way of Fish River, the attack upon the strong position of Spanish Fort was begun on March 27th, and prosecuted with great vigor until April 8th, when the enemy evacuated the fort at midnight, and our troops took possession. Fort Blakely was carried by assault next day, (our Regiment being in reserve,) and Mobile surrendered formally on the 12th. On the 13th began the arduous march of some 175 miles to Montgomery, the State Capital; which was entered without opposition on the 25th April.

The news of Lee's surrender reached the Regiment during this march, and all congratulated themselves that the war was over, and that they should soon be permitted to return to the homes they had been absent from so long. They were not fated to go so soon as they hoped. From Montgomery the Regiment marched to Selma, and thence went by rail to Meridian, Miss.; in which vicinity it remained until the middle of August, when it was sent to Vicksburg. From that point, in October, six companies were sent to Yazoo City, and the other four to Greenville, on the Mississippi River, and there they remained until, on November 14th, the long desired order for their muster out was issued by the Department Commander, Gen. Osterhaus.

On the morning of the 30th Camp Butler was reached; and there, after a week's delay, the enlisted men were paid off and finally discharged on Wednesday, the 6th Dec., the commissioned officers receiving their final pay and discharge in Springfield on the following day.

It should have been mentioned in its proper place, that in the latter part of July, 1865, the Regiment, which had become reduced to a rather low figure, was filled up above the maximum, by transfers of large numbers of recruits from the 72d, 117th, 122d and 124th Illinois Regiments, on the muster out of those organizations. Considerably over a thousand names were borne on the rolls for a time; but a very considerable number were discharged by expiration of service in October and November; and perhaps 50 men embraced the privilege of being discharged at Vicksburg, with a view of remaining South, on the muster out of the Regiment. Something over seven hundred men came up the river, and probably a hundred absentees joined the Regiment at Camp Butler.

To this account the following may be added:

Field and Staff.

The first field officers of the regiment were

Colonel, CHARLES E. HOVEY, of Bloomington.
Lieutenant Colonel, WILLIAM R. LOCKWOOD, of Quincy,
Major EDWARD R. ROE, of Bloomington.

Lieutenant Colonel Lockwood resigned in March, 1862, and Captain Charles E. Lippincott, of Co. K, (Morgan County,) was promoted to fill the vacancy. In the fall of that year, Col. Hovey received a Presidential appointment as Brigadier General; and Lieut. Col. Lippincott was promoted to full Colonel; Maj. Roe to Lieut. Colonel; and Captain Leander H. Potter of Co. A., (Bloomington,) to Major.

Lieut. Colonel Roe was wounded in the grand assault on Vicksburg, May 22d, 1863; and resigned his commission. Major Potter was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel, and Captain Isaac H. Elliott, of Co. E. (fromPrinceton, Bureau Co.,) became Major.

In the summer of 1864, Lieut. Col. Potter resigned; Major Elliott was promoted to fill the vacancy; and Capt. Henry H. Pope of Co. D, (Christian Co.,) was made Major. No further change occurred until near the muster out of the regiment, when Col. Lippincott, who had been brevetted Brigadier General some months before, was discharged by expiration of commission. The field officers then became as follows:

Colonel, Isaac H. Elliott; Lieutenant Colonel, Henry H. Pope; Major, Elijah H. Gray, late Captain of Company F.

The Staff of the Regiment during the war, was constituted as follows:

Major GEORGE P. REX, Surgeon during the whole war.

The Dead of Company C, 33d Illinois.

Twenty-five deaths appear upon the company records, as occurring among the members of this company during the war. Several others are known to have taken place within a few weeks after the discharge of the parties, "by reason of disability;" the death clearly chargeable to the disease contracted in the service.

The following list embraces those who actually died in the service, arranged in chronological order:

1. WILLIAM M. JONES, Corporal, died October 4th, 1861, at Arcadia, Mo., of typhoid fever. The disease prevailed with great severity in the regiment during this autumn, and eight deaths occurred from it in this company, either in camp at Arcadia, or in hospital at the adjoining town of Ironton, before the close of the year 1861.
2. NARCISSE LIVERNOIS, private, Canadian by birth, died Oct. 12th, 1861, at Arcadia, Mo.
3. DAVID IRISH, private, died Nov. 6th, 1861, at Ironton.
4. ANDREW J. BOYD, private, died Nov. 8th, 1861, at Ironton.
5. SAMUEL B. OSWALT, Corporal, died Nov. 12th, 1861, at Ironton.
6. SAMUEL J. FOGLE, private, died Nov. 13th, 1861, at Ironton.
7. ALEXANDER W. WOOD, private, died Dec. 13th, 1861, at Ironton.
8. WILLIAM TURNIPSEED, private, died Dec. 28th, 1861, at Ironton. This young man suffered fearfully for several weeks, with rheumatism, but finally died of the prevailing disease.
9. WARNER A. BLUE, Private, died April 30th, 1862, at Pitman's Ferry, Ark., of Pneumonia, during the march of the regiment southward. His illness was brief and violent.
10. WILLIAM H. SIZEMORE, Private, died July 13th, 1862, on the road from Clarendon to Helena, Ark. Had been sick a long time, and finally succumbed during this dreadful march.
11. LEVEN A. MOORE, Private, died Aug. 11th, 1862, at Old Town Landing, (below Helena,) Ark., of congestive chills.
12. ISAAC W. SHINER, Private, killed May 16th, 1863, at the battle of Champion Hill, Miss.

13. CHAPMAN SHORES, Private, killed May 16th, 1863, at the battle of Champion Hill, Miss.

(The regiment had been in reserve, and was just being pushed forward into action, when these two men fell mortally wounded, and both died in a few hours. The fatal shot was thought to have been an accidental one from our own side, but this must ever be uncertain, Mr. Shores left a wife and child. All the rest of the foregoing list were young and unmarried men.)

14. HENRY M. KELLOGG, Captain, killed in action at Vicksburg, Miss., May 20th, 1863, in the earliest advances upon the rebel works. He was quite a young man, a native of Massachusetts, and teacher by profession. He joined the company as 2d Lieutenant at its original organization; was made 1st Lieutenant at the formation of the Regiment, and Captain Jan. 24th, 1862. For some days before his death he was quite unwell, and was depressed in spirits by a presentiment of his approaching fate. He was killed by a shot through the head, while leading his company to an advanced position, and his sword was found so firmly clutched in his hand as to require a strong effort to release it. He left a wife and child.

15. DAVID H. MITCHELL, } Privates, both killed on the field in the grand
16. WILLIAM D. SHOUP, } assault on the rebel works at Vicksburg, May 22d, 1863. Mitchell was a boy of feeble and sickly frame, but a brave spirit; was scarcely able to go into battle on this fatal day, yet went cheerfully. Shoup left a wife and several children.

17. WILLIAM H. HAWKINS, Private, mortally wounded in the above assault, May 22d, 1863, and died of wound, June 27th, 1863, in hospital at Memphis, Tenn.

18. PETER D. JONES, Private, died of disease, Aug. 26th, 1863, in hospital at Memphis, Tenn. Left a wife and family.

19. JOHN H. CHILDERS, Private, died of disease, Oct. 11th, 1863, in hospital, at New Orleans, La.

20. CHARLES S. SHINN, Private, died Nov. 19th, 1863, at Atlanta, Ill., of disease, while at home on furlough.

21. GEORGE H. FIFER, 1st Lieutenant, native of Virginia, died Dec. 26th, 1863, in hospital at Fort Esperanza, Texas, of a wound received Nov. 27th, 1863, in the attack on that place. He was serving at the time on the staff of Colonel Washburn, commanding Brigade.

(All these deaths, it will be observed, occurred before the "veteranization," or re-enlistment, of the company. After that event, the deaths were as follows:)

22. FRANCIS CUVILLIER, Private, died April 12th, 1865, in hospital at New Orleans, La., of a wound received April 8th, by the premature explosion of a shell, at the siege of Spanish Fort, near Mobile, Ala. He was an "Acadian," or French creole; native of Louisiana, aged seventeen, and had belonged to the company less than three months. Had been once severely wounded in escaping from a rebel impressment squad, near his home in Louisiana, a few months before enlisting in the Union service.

23. JAMES STEVENSON, Private, died Sep. 12th, 1865, in hospital at Vicksburg, of congestive fever. Was transferred to this company from the 72d Illinois. Old man; left a wife and children.

24. JOHN RILEY, Private, died Sept. 15th, 1865, in hospital at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., of disease. Was transferred from the 124th Illinois; native of Ireland; enlisted at Vicksburg. Nothing known of his family.

25. WILLIAM P. LANPHIER, Private, accidentally drowned, at midnight of Oct. 14th, 1865, in the Yazoo River, Miss., on the way from Vicksburg to Yazoo City. Body afterwards recovered and buried at Paxton's Landing, Yazoo River. Was an original member of the company. Left no family.

Besides the above, as already mentioned, at least three members of the company died shortly after being discharged for disability, of disease contracted in the service, viz.:

ISAAC OSWALT, WILLIAM TRIMMER and CHARLES S. SMITH, Privates, all discharged in November, 1862, and died almost immediately after.

Company K, 26th Illinois Infantry, Veteran Volunteers.

THIS company was recruited in Bloomington, McLean County, Illinois, in December, A. D., 1861, and organized at that place on the 31st day of December, 1861, by the election of Ira J. Bloomfield, of Bloomington, Illinois, Captain. Allen H. Dillon, of McLean, Illinois, 1st Lieutenant, and John B. Bruner, of Vermont, Illinois, 2d Lieutenant.

At the time of organization the company contained only eighty-one men, or the minimum number necessary, but during the fore part of Januery it was filled to the maximum number, one hundred and one men, and was fully clothed and equipped and mustered into the service of the United States, at Bloomington, Illinois, by Captain C. B. Watson, 14th U. S. Infantry, Jan. 28th, 1862.

The 26th Illinois Infantry, Colonel John Mason Loomis, commanding, had been sent into the field without the full complement of companies, and by request of Captain Bloomfield, this company was assigned by Governor Yates to that Reiment, and marched to join it, then at Hannibal, Mo., Feb. 6th, 1862.

The encampment at Hannibal, Mo., was broken up on the 19th day of February, 1862, and the company, together with the Regiment, marched to join General Pope's army, then being organized at Commerce, Mo., for a campaign against New Madrid, Island No. 10, etc., to flank Columbus, Ky., then held by the enemy, and open the navigation of the Mississippi River. The weather was cold and the roads very bad, and the troops suffered much from the fact that they were unaccustomed to campaigning. The company participated in the battles and skirmishes at New Madrid, Point Pleasant, Mo., Riddle's Point, and the capture of those places, and of Island No. 10.

At the close of this campaign they were embarked upon steamboats and went down the Mississippi River, near Fort Pickering; but returned and went up the Tennessee River to join General Halleck's army, in front of Corinth. They have since that time participated in the following noted campaigns, marches, sieges and battles:

Battle of Farmington, Miss., May 9th, 1862; Smith's Farm, May 28th, 1862; Siege of Corinth; March to Boonsville, Miss.; Battle of Iuka, Sept. 19th, 1862; Battle of Corinth, Oct. 3d and 4th, 1862; March to Oxford, Miss.; Return march and recapture of Holly Springs; Skirmish at Collierville, Tenn., May 11th, 1863; Siege of Vicksburg and Jackson, Miss.; March with General Sherman from Memphis, Tenn., across the country to Chattanooga, and participated in the great battle of Mission Ridge, in which the regiment suffered severely, one-third of the officers and men being killed or wounded.

Immediately after this battle, without any time to recruit or refit after the fatigues of the long march and severe battle, they were started on the march to Knoxville, Tenn., to the relief of General Burnside, then besieged by Longstreet. The march thence to Marysville, Tenn., over a hundred miles, and return to Scottsboro, Ala., was very severe, and during it many of the men became covered with vermin, for they had no change of clothing for over four weeks, and their shoes wore out so that towards the last many of them could be tracked by the blood of their feet upon the frozen ground.

At Scottsboro, Ala., the company re-enlisted, there being sixty-one men present, of whom sixty entered the Veteran organization. They arrived at Bloomington, Illinois, January 22d, 1864, on veteran furlough, and were given a public reception and dinner by the citizens. By the energy of the officers and men, the company was again filled to the maximum number, and at the expiration of their furlough, they again returned to the field, and participated in all the marches, movements and severe battles which finally resulted in the capture of Atlanta, Georgia, being then in the 2d Brigade, 1st Division, 15th Army Corps—Major General John A. Logan, commanding.

For a short time after the fall of Atlanta, they remained in camp at East Point, Ga.; but when Hood started north, they marched in pursuit of him to Galesville, then returned with the army to Atlanta, and participated in General Sherman's grand march to the sea. On this march they were engaged in the battle of Griswoldville, near Macon, Ga., the only fighting of any note during the campaign until they arrived at Savannah.

After the capture of Savannah they were transported by sea to Beaufort, S. C., from whence, on the 31st of January, 1865, they started with the grand army for the march northward through the Carolinas to Goldsboro. This was a long and arduous march, much of the time wading through the swamps, or building corduroy bridges and roads to enable the teams to follow us; but all was borne with admirable patience and cheerfulness by the men. Near the close of this march, they were engaged in the battle of Bentonville, in which the company suffered severely.

They arrived at Goldsborough, N. C., on the 25th day of March, 1865, after a march of nearly two months' duration. Most of the men were barefooted, and some of them nearly naked, yet all of them were in excellent health and best of spirits. They were fully equipped here, and on the 10th of April marched with the army towards Raleigh, N. C. After the capitulation of Johnston, they marched, via. Richmond, to Washington, turning aside to Mount Vernon to pay a tribute of respect to the Father of their Country. On the 24th, day of May, 1865, they participated in the Grand Review of Gen. Sherman, at Washington, being in the leading Division of the Army of the Tennessee. For about a week after the review, they remained in camp near Crystal Springs, D. C., and were then transported by railroad and steamboats to Louisville where they were finally mustered out on the 20th day of July, 1865.

The following is a partial list of changes that occurred in the organization during its term of service:

PROMOTED.

Captain Ira J. Bloomfield to Lieut. Col. Jan. 4th, 1865; Colonel, May 11th, 1865.

2d Lieutenant John B. Bruner to 1st Lieutenant, Feb. 4th, 1863; Captain, March 26th, 1865; Major, June 18th, 1865.

Sergeant Thomas E. Ludwig to 2d Lieutenant Feb. 4th, 1863.

Sergeant John A. Davis to 2d Lieutenant Oct. 20th, 1864; 1st Lieutenant March 26th, 1865; Captain, June 18th, 1865.

Sergeant Henry Allen to 2d Lieutenant March 26th, 1865; 1st Lieutenant, June 18th, 1865.

Sergeant Mathias Hoyt to 2d Lieutenant July 27th, 1865.

KILLED IN BATTLE.

Thomas E. Ludwig, 2d Lieutenant, at Jonesboro, Ga., Aug. 31st, 1864, in a charge, by a musket ball which severed the left sub-clavian vein.

Melville R. Haynie, Private, at Farmington, Miss., May 9th, 1862; by musket ball in left breast.

Martin Hanley, Private, shot in a skirmish with guerrillas, near Hudson Station, Miss., Dec. 4th, 1862. He was wounded and while lying helpless upon the ground, his brains were then beaten out with a heavy revolver by Lieut Powell, of the guerrilla company.

August Oker, Private, in battle of Ezra Church, Ga., July 28th, 1864; by a shell which carried away the right side of his face.

Daniel Allison, Private, Sept. 4th, 1864, at Lovejoy Station, Ga.; by musket ball through the head while eating his supper near the breastworks.

Benjamin C. Hill, Private, at Bentonville, N. C., March 21st, 1865; by musket ball through the head while on the skirmish.

John D. Weaver, Private, at Bentonville, N. C., March 22d, by musket ball through the right breast; in a charge to secure Mill Creek bridge.

KILLED BY ACCIDENT.

Edwin S. Loveland, Corporal, crushed by the falling of a wood pile, at Memphis, Tenn., June 1st, 1863.

DIED OF DISEASE.

Robertson Grant, Private, of measles, at Hannibal, Mo., March 14th, 1862.
Mark F. Onion, Private, of fever, at Black River, Miss., Aug. 21st, 1863.
William R. Beers, Private, of fever, at Black River, Miss., Aug 23d, 1863.
William R. Cheney, Private, of fever, at Black River, Miss., Aug. 27th, 1863.
John McKay, Corporal, of heart disease, at Scottsboro, Ala., March, 1864.
Timothy Crane, Private, of fever, at Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct., 1864.

RESIGNED.

Allen H. Dillon, 1st Lieutenant, Dec. 11th, 1862.

DESERTED.

John J. Bowman, Private, at Resaca, May 13th, 1864.
Zebulon Riddle, Private, at Resaca, May 13th, 1864.
John W. Sheets, Private, at Resaca, May 13th, 1864.
Peter Murphy, Private, at Collierville, June 7th, 1863.

We very much regret that we are unable to give an accurate list of the wounded, and of those who died of wounds; but it is impossible without the records, which are in Washington.

Company B., 88th Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

Joseph Owens, private, died in Louisville, Ky.; cause, and date of death, were never officially reported.
John B. Pierce, private, died in Nashville, Tenn., November 1862, of pneumonia.
Benjamin H. Staupee, private, killed at Resaca, Ga., May 14th, 1864.
Cyrus Freed, private, mortally wounded at Resaca, Ga., May 14th, 1864; died at Chattanoga, Tenn., June 1st, 1864.
Sergeant Laban Manning, killed at Chickamauga, September 20th, 1863.

The above list comprises all that belong to McLean county, that were in the 88th, Co. B.; was the only company that was raised in this county.

Thirty-Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

Captain Chauncy Williams enlisted September 6th, 1861, in Co. I., 39th Regiment, was detailed, some time during the following winter, to recruit for the regiment, and on the 4th of March, 1862, was elected Captain of Co. H., just then organized. Participated in the several engagements of Blackwater, Zeno, and Franklin, Va., was also in the siege of Charleston, S. C., from July 10th to October 28th, 1863, ending in the capture of Forts Wagner and Gregg. Re-enlisted as a Veteran, January 1st, 1864, and at the expiration of furlough with the regiment, joined the army of the James. Engaged in the battles of Drury's Bluff, Va., May 16th, 1864; Wier Bottom Church, May 20th, and June 2d, 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th, 1864; Deep Bottom, Va., August 14th, 1864. Was shot through the head, and instantly killed, in the battle of Deep Run, August 16th, 1864. His last words were—"Boys, we'll go into them pits or die." Thus heroically fell one of McLean County's bravest sons, loved and lamented by all who knew him. Captain Williams was born in Lower Canada, August 7th, 1837; was raised in the State of New York, and had been a resident of this county for six years.

Company K., 8th Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

Samuel S. Keeran, private of Co. K., 8th Illinois Infantry; born March 18th, 1842, in McLean County, Illinois. Enlisted July 29th, 1861. Participated in the fight of Pittsburg Landing, April 6th and 7th, 1862. Was accidentally wounded in the hand at Memphis, Tenn., February 1st, 1863, and died from the effects of the wound, on the 8th of the same month. His remains were brought home for interment.

14th REGIMENT ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS INFANTRY.

Joseph H. Rayburn, son of Judge J. Rayburn, was born January 17th, 1839, in Madison County, Ohio, and removed with his parents to Bloomington, Ills., October, 1851, and lived with them until the breaking out of the rebellion, when he volunteered among the very first in the cause of the Union, first in the three months service, and afterwards enlisted May 24th, in the 14th Regt. Illinois Volunteers, commanded by Colonel (now Major General,) John M. Palmer, and went into the field the following July, in North Missouri. After some services, he was detailed with others, as a guard for Gen. David Hunter, marching and counter-marching over Missouri, thence to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; from there to the front, in Tennessee, about the time of the Fort Donaldson fight; from there to Shiloh and Pittsburg Landing, and being unwell from the time of leaving Fort Leavenworth, was unfit for duty, and was, with others, sent to the Hospital at St. Louis, on the eve before the battle of Shiloh, and was unfit for duty until the last of May, when he rejoined the regiment on the march from Corinth to Memphis, at which place they went into camp, and the weather being very warm, he with two of his comrades, went a bathing, and being a poor swimmer, notwithstanding the efforts of his companions to save him, was drowned August 8th, 1862.

COMPANY "A," FIRST ILLINOIS CAVALRY.

At the breaking out of the rebellion, when the President issued his first call for men, there were many who desired to go as cavalry. One hundred and twenty-eight men signed an agreement to enlist in a cavalry company which was organized and officers elected on the 26th day of April, 1861.

The Legislature passed an Act which was approved May 3d, 1861, authorizing the organization of a regiment of cavalry, consisting of ten companies. These companies were not called into active service until June 26th.

The "Loomis Dragoons," named in honor of Col. John S. Loomis, Aide-de Camp to His Excellency the Governor, and afterwards Assistant Adjutant General, with three other companies, rendezvoused at Alton, Illinois.

July 5th, 1861, having been organized at Bloomington July 3d, by admitting thirty men from Putnam County, under James B. Dent, who was chosen 2d Lieutenant, the Company was mustered into the United States service with the following named officers:—

Captain..... J. McNULTA,
1st Lieutenant..... GEO. F. JANNATT,
2d Lieutenant..... J. B. DENT.

The Company crossed to St. Charles, Mo., about July 15th, where they remained some time under command of Brigadier Gen. John Pope, who ordered Captain McNulta to proceed with his Company by the North Missouri Railroad, and report to Col. U. S. Grant, commanding at Mexico, Mo.

Col. Grant employed the Company some time in breaking up small parties of rebels that were organizing in the country preparatory to joining their main army.

It was afterwards detached with Company A, 15th Illinois Infantry, Captain Kelly, to occupy and clear Montgomery and Pike Counties, of rebels. Owing to an urgent necessity for troops in another quarter, the Infantry Company was withdrawn, and in lieu of them Captain McNulta was ordered to command and direct any organization of home guards or citizens that might be available against a force then organizing under the rebel General Harris, and consisting of about 1,500 men.

The Union men of Pike and Montgomery Counties moved promptly to the work, and joined this little band of fifty-two mounted men, armed only with sabres and old-fashioned horse pistols, that had been changed from flint to percussion locks, to attack an overwhelming force. The plan of campaign was, for the cavalry to attack the enemy with their sabres, and cut through his line at all hazards. The home guards following close after with their shot guns and rifles. The column, consisting of about 120 men, took up a line of march in the direction of the enemy's camp. Small parties of his men were occasionally seen, and immediately and vigorously pursued. Owing to the apparent energy and determination of our force, and the imperfectly organized condition of his own, the rebel commander gave instructions to his men to "scatter in every direction, conceal or destroy their arms, and pretend to be peaceable citizens pursuing their lawful avocations." Our little band pushed forward triumphantly, taking prisoners in squads from three to twenty, when at last, worn and tired by many hours constant labor, a halt was ordered, and preparations made to bivouac near a spring close by. The main body of the command had dismounted at the house of a Unionist, where they were being liberally supplied with grain for their horses, and food for themselves. The advance and rear guards only were on the alert. Sudden and unexpectedly a shrill piercing whistle was heard, which was familiar as the Captain's signals, "prepare for action," and "to horse." For a moment all seemed confusion. Men half-starved threw away the coveted food, and ran with their utmost speed to their horses and arms. In two minutes arrangements were complete for a fight. The enemy were reported in large force at the Spring selected for our bivouac. Our little band moved forward with drawn sabres, with instructions to the cavalry to cut through, and the Home Guards to follow. The cavalry moved out at a trot, and when within two hundred yards of a large body of armed men who were evidently surprised, broke into a galop, bringing their silken flag to the front. To the surprise and astonishment of all, the supposed enemy, upon the appearance of our beautiful flag, ceased all preparations for resistance, and sent up cheers for the Union and the flag.

The charging party was halted, and a parley had which ended in a general hand shaking and hurrahing, ended in a social bivouac, and feasting upon the good things that were brought in in abundance by the fairest and loyal daughters of Missouri.

The party at the Spring was about 800 of Col. Henderson's (now U. S. Senator,) regiment, who had moved out to assist the little command that were attacking from the west, and who were mistaken for enemies. Thus ended what was then regarded as the "Battle of Bush Creek," by the sensational reporters of the day. The march of this Company through Pike County, was one ovation, grand barbacues being given in their honor at Ashland and Bowling Green.

The hospitalities of the citizens was accepted by officers and soldiers, and so loyal and enthusiastic were the citizens, that not only were the soldiers taken to their homes and everything furnished them without any expense to the government, but many presents were bestowed upon them, and so much kindness exhibited, that leaving there was like going from home. In token of the esteem of the Company, four young men of Pike County were admitted as members, viz.: Jehill P. Loper, Larkin L. Harris, George W. Furl, and John H. Davenport. From here the Company returned to Mexico, Col. Grant having sent five regiments of infantry and a battery of artillery to assist them, received information of the dispersing of the enemy when they had gone about five miles, ordered their return, and remarked that he was satisfied that those men would cut their way through any rebel force in that country. The Company, after a short stay at Mexico, was ordered to Jefferson Barracks, thence to Jefferson City, and from there was ordered to move to Lexington with the rest of the regiment. Lexington was then garrisoned by about 200 Home Guards, who were besieged by a rebel force of about 800 men. Having relieved the garrison at Lexington, and remaining a few days, this, with three other companies of the 1st Cavalry, and eight companies of the 13th (afterwards 25th) Missouri Infantry, and two pieces of artillery, the whole under command of Col. Peabody, moved to Warrensburg, Captain McNulta having in his charge about one million of dollars in gold and currency that was taken from the Lexington Banks to be transferred to St. Louis. Information being received that the enemy were advancing as well as additional forces (Col. Mulligan's Regiment,) for the defence of Lexington, the money was turned over, and this Company ordered to the front as an advance guard, to feel the enemy. When at Warrensburg, (Sept. 9th,) it was discovered that Price's whole army was within five miles of that place. The whole detachment commenced a retreat at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 10th, in the direction of Lexington. The command bivouaced 15 miles from Lexington on the nights of the 10th and 11th, waiting for the advance of the enemy that had halted some time before dark.

The enemy's advance of about 5,000 cavalry, came in sight soon after daylight, on the 11th. Our force reached Lexington about 2 o'clock. This company having formed the advance guard going out, and the extreme rear guard in retreating before the enemy. Additional re-enforcements were hourly expected. The entire garrison of the place numbered 2,640—(this is the exact number, the writer took it from the official report of each command, given in that day to the commanding officer)—of these, but about 2,300 men could be brought into action against a force of about 25,000 of the enemy. At this time, the only fortification was a small breastwork only musket proof, and sufficient for, at most, 150 men, and which was not used. On the afternoon of the 11th, the enemy attacked the out posts. The skirmishing was heavy but indecisive; the ground lost by our forces being regained after dark. For some reason, the work on breastworks was not commenced until 11 o'clock, P.M., but when begun it was vigorously prosecuted. At daylight, on the morning of the 12th, a good musket proof work was completed in front of the 23d Illinois, (Irish Brigade,) and a fair one on the line of the 13th, (25th) Missouri.

The enemy attacked our out posts with much caution on the morning of the 12th. Our line was immediately reinforced with four companies of Infantry, Colonel Peabody commanding. Every inch of the ground was contested by our men; at 9 o'clock, the amunition giving out and men becoming exhausted under this unequal contest, re-enforcements consisting of two additional companies of the 13th, under Captain Niccolls, and companies A. and D., 1st Ill. Cavalry, under Captain McNulta, were sent to the front. When they arrived our line was being driven back. The cavalry moved promptly forward with drawn sabres. The two companies of infantry with fixed bayonets, and checked the advance of the enemy. This movement being reported to the commanding officer of the cavalry, Major D. P. Jenkins was directed to relieve Captain McNulta, he being considered too indiscreet to be entrusted with a detached command under such critical circumstances; having applied for permission to dispense with such fire arms as he had, saying he wanted no weapons for his men but spurs and sabres—the spurs to drive the horses into the enemy's ranks, and the sabres to crack their heads with. Two o'clock found our forces driven back on to the main line, having been flanked on the right and left. Every available man was then brought into action on both sides. The first attack on the main line was sudden and impulsive. The enemy evidently expecting to drive our forces from their imperfectly constructed breastworks, overwhelm and capture our force at one dash.

The cavalry was withdrawn to the rear of our infantry, and during the rest of the afternoon, with the exception of detachments, were in action. From two until six o'clock, the infantry and detachments on the main line kept back the enemy only by the greatest exertions. A part of our cavalry was then moved to the front, and dispositions made for an attack with sabres; but for some reason unknown, Col. Mulligan countermanded his order. The enemy fell back in confusion at dark, but during the night partialy reorganized their command, formed their lines anew, and on the evening of the 13th made a feeble attack on our out posts. On the 14th and 15th, his operations were more vigorous. Having received large reinforcements on the 16th and 17th, our lines were actively engaged. During this time our infantry and cavalry camps were entrenched. Fougasses or powder mines, placed at irregular intervals outside our work, connected with the inside by fuses.

A foundry was taken by Co. A, and put in operation, making solid shot and cannister for our artillery. All necessary arrangements were made for casting a piece of artillery, but subsequent movements of the enemy prevented this. It became evident that the enemy would make a general attack on the morning of the 18th; preperations were made to receive him. A rumor was current in camp that reinforcements for us were close at hand. From 11 o'clock, P.M., of the 17th, to 2 o'clock, A.M., of the 18th, distant cannonading could be distinctly heard. This imbued the garrison with new spirits. Every man seemed determined to hold out until our friends could reach us; in fact, such a thing as defeat or surrender was not spoken about, but every man seemed confident of success. At 8 o'clock, on the morning of the 18th, the enemy fired a single gun from his central division, near the Fair Ground, which was immediately answered by a single gun from his right and left wings.

His army moved forward in three columns, our skirmishers and out-posts retiring, making little or no resistance, and falling back inside of our works, when the enemy entered the town. Here was presented one of the noblest spectacles that man ever beheld.

That little garrison, of not more than two thousand three hundred men, indifferently armed, with an insufficient supply of ammunition or commissary stores. Waiting patiently for the attack of the enemy, and as confident of success as though there was not half their own number against them. For a time there was a death-like stillness, broken by the noise of the advancing columns of the enemy, that sounded like distant thunder. On they came, filling every street, lane, and alley of the town, moving in all directions, except from the river side, and directing their movement on one common centre—closing up until every available spot in or about that city seemed to be covered by human beings. At 10 o'clock, the enemy fired a shot that struck immediately in front of the line of Co's. A. and B. 1st Cavalry, which ricochet over our men's head. This was a signal for a general attack, which was immediately made on the whole line, and continued for two hours, during which time we lost that part of our line nearest the river, and the enemy took possession of our hospital, and inhumanly used it as a point of attack, while yet containing our sick and wounded. The building being close by, and overlooking our work, the enemy's sharp shooters could readily pick off our men inside. Colonel Mulligan ordered the place to be retaken by half a company, but this force being deemed insufficient the movement was delayed for some minutes, when he appeared in person on the ground, and lead Captain Gleason's Company, (23d Illinois,) to the sally front, from whence the Captain lead them, followed at a distance of about ten paces, by Captain Schmidt, (13th Mo.,) with a full company. The cavaly, now dismounted, on the right and left, pouring in a steady fire, protecting, as far as possible, these men, who dashed down past a part of the enemy's line, and within easy range of not less than ten thousand of his infantry, to take this house that was held by more than their own number. They did not stop until they got upon the portico of the house, and then they actually fired their guns in the enemy's faces; our men putting their guns through the windows firing in, and the enemy's guns crossing theirs firing out. Soon the doors were battered in, when bayonets were freely used, and the enemy driven from the house. This was a dear bought victory—paid for by more than half of the men of each of these companies being killed or wounded. The house was soon after retaken by the enemy.

On the afternoon of the 20th, a part of the line being entirely out of ammunition, the enemy became emboldened by the seeming lack of resistance and succeeded in creating considerable confusion among the men left in this almost helpless condition. For a few minutes it seemed certain that all would be lost—that the enemy, who was massing his forces against our weak point, would carry it by storm.

Col. Mulligan who could always be found where the fighting was the fiercest, endeavored, by his personal example and words of encouragement, to imbue the men with renewed courage and ordered them to stand to their post and drive the enemy back with their sabres and bayonets. Running back to the infantry, he ordered out the first troops he came to, (a company of home guards,) to support the point then being assailed. Owing to a deficiency in drill, they could not be moved with sufficient celerity to answer the purpose.

He called out—"men, more men." Co. "A" was the first to answer the call. They were in double-quick to the front, followed closely by the home-guards, in less time than it takes to read this paragraph.

During the fight they had been provided with muskets that had been dropped by our killed and wounded. The scabbards were thrown away, the naked sabre blade carried in the right hand, and in the left either a musket or pistol, and in some instances both.

They reached the line when the enemy were yet some distance from it—but only in time to save it by preventing the enemy from breaking through. With the assistance of the home-guards and the few men who had ammunition, or who were willing to, and in some instances did, use their sabres and bayonets, the enemy was checked for a few minutes, until the arrival of four companies of the 23d Ills. and several companies of home-guards, under Colonels Grover and White. Here Col. Grover, the brave old patriot, was wounded, from which he died a few days after; that gallant officer and courteous gentleman, whose manly appearance and noble actions throughout the fight, won for him the admiration of all—received a wound in the neck that paralyzed all his limbs, and in a moment made a poor helpless cripple out of one of natures finest specimens of manhood. Here fell our bravest and best men, and here, in less than twenty minutes, we lost more men than we did during the whole siege, excepting that bloody charge upon the Hospital. The ammunition was all gone, the firing ceased; an unauthorized person raised a white flag, (a handkerchief on a bayonet,) it was almost instantly taken down by the men near him. He succeeded in raising it a second time, when it was again taken down and he threatened with instant death should he attempt to raise another. The men becoming excited and angered to such an extent that they were about to put him out of the line, when he asserted that he was acting under the authority of the commanding officer, who desired to communicate with the enemy in relation to the killed and wounded then lying between the lines; with this statement he was not only not molested but was permitted to again raise the white flag. The enemy enquiring the cause, led to a parley, during which a council of war was held, and during which surrender was not referred to. The question was, shall we evacuate or shall we continue to fight? Two or three, (not more,) of about fourteen officers present favored evacuation, the rest were in favor of defending the place until re-enforcements arrived, which were then presumed to be but a few miles distant. The council broke—the officers were ordered to their several commands and renew the fight, when one inquired what could be done, as there "was not three rounds of ammunition to the man." "Go," said Mulligan, "Go, gentlemen, and fight them without ammunition. When they charge upon you meet them with sabres and bayonets; hew them down, drive them back or perish in the attempt. The place must be held."

To the astonishment of all, at 5 o'clock, while preparations were being made for a continued resistance, Gen. Price, with his staff and body-guard rode inside of our lines. It was soon after announced that the "garrison had surrendered with the honors of war." The rebel army moved up, and when the announcement of surrender was made, commenced to cheer, which was immediately ordered stopped by Gen Price, who, pointing to our men and addressing Gen. Stern, (Rebel,) said, "There is not much to cheer for, order it stopped." So ended one of the fiercest contests known in the history of civilized warfare; 2640 men, many of whom never drilled once in their lives, poorly armed, with only such fortifications as they could make after the fight actually begun, contending with a force varying in strength, and increasing from 17,000 to 36,400, (official report to Gen. Price, Sept. 21st,) for nine days. When the garrison surrendered the ammunition was entirely exhausted. The men had not had a drop of water to quench the thirst occasioned by the constant inhalation of the fumes of burning powder. This company was, however, more fortunate than any other, having, early on the morning of the 20th, under cover of darkness, passed outside of our lines to a cistern in the yard of Hunter's house, which had been burned, and driving the enemy from it procured a sufficient amount to supply the Hospital for that day as well as their own immediate wants. On the morning of the 21st of Sept. the officers were separated from their commands and assigned quarters in the city.

The enlisted men were required to take an oath to "not serve against the Missouri State Guard or the Confederate States of America during the present war." To this many objected, when rebel officers gave them to understand distinctly it was their only chance for safety. Co. "A" refused to a man.—When nearly all the troops had taken the oath they were again called on and again refused. When all had taken the oath they were informed that they would be allowed one, and one chance only, to comply with the demand made on them. They still refused until they could communicate with their officers on the subject. This privilege was positively denied them. The non-commissioned officers were called upon to act in their stead, and, after a careful deliberation and discussion of the subject, it was determined to comply with the demand, under protest, as it was beyond their power to do otherwise. This they very politely communicated to the rebel parolling officer, who informed them "that he didn't care a d——n for their protest," jumbled over the obligation, and without making any effort to determine the number of deserters in the line, simply said, "I've got through with you, you can go to hell or wherever you have a mind to now." The men were taken across the river and marched to the North Missouri Rail Road and conveyed from thence to St. Louis, where they were regularly discharged, under an order from Maj. Gen. Fremont, Oct. 8th, 1861. The officers were held until Sept. 28th, when they gave their parole to not serve against the Missouri State Guard of Confederate States until regularly exchanged, with the proviso, that should they desire to do so, they should be permitted to surrender their parole, and deliver themselves as prisoners of war—the same as though no parole had been given. The officers were exchanged soon after, and orders issued from the War Department annulling the effect of Gen. Fremont's order where the men desired to take the benefit of it.

This regiment and company was re-organized in Dec. 1861, and Jan. 1862, at Benton Barracks, under Brigadier General W. I. Sherman. Company "A" was ordered to Rolla, Mo., April 6th, 1862; thence to Houston and West Plains, Mo., where it met Gen. Curtis' army. It was stationed at the last named place doing out-post duty, or more properly carrying on a guerrilla warfare with the small parties of rebels that infested that country, having almost daily collisions with them.

In obedience to an order of the War Department, for the mustering out of the Regiment, the Company was mustered out, to take effect July 17th, 1862, at St. Louis, Mo.

The Company upon their return after being taken prisoners, was received amidst ringing of bells and the acclamations of between seven and ten thousand people who met them at the depot. They turned over their flag, which was presented by the ladies of McLean County, and which had floated so proudly over our work at Lexington until the surrender, when it was carried off by H. C. Carrico, and thereby saved. It was struck by upwards of three hundred musket balls and completely riddled. Carrico was afterwards promoted for his gallantry to Sergeant Major, and to Captain in the 14th Illinois Cavalry.

The following is the list of the original Company, with marginal notes showing the service of such as are known to the writer, from memory; having no records of the facts, a complete list of the wounded cannot be given. There were, however, three killed, viz: Thomas Martin, William P. Esborn and John Ryder; and nineteen wounded at the siege of Lexington.

DR. E. FARLEY,

OCULIST

Dr. F. makes it his exclusive business to treat the Eye. He has made an IMPORTANT DISCOVERY by which he

CURES DISEASED EYES WITHOUT CAUSTIC

His Success in Treating the Eye is without parallel.

TESTIMONIALS.

BLOOMING GROVE, June 1st, 1865.

I was afflicted with sore eyes, and was confined in a dark room for about four months—was blind. I tried several physicians, and found no relief until I sent for Dr Farley, of Bloomington. He cured me in seven weeks. My eyes have not troubled me any since last September. I can see to thread a fine needle.

MRS. W. LINDLEY.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.

I deem it but justice to the public and to Dr. Farley to make the following statement with regard to my eyes: I suffered with sore eyes for five years—a great portion of the time unable to do business. I tried many physicians and obtained no relief. I finally went under Dr. Farley's care. I was with him but a short time. My eyes have not troubled me any since. I cheerfully recommend Dr. Farley, of Bloomington, to those who are afflicted with diseases of the eyes, knowing him to be successful.

W. E. HENRY.

MCLEAN, MCLEAN Co., Ill.

This is to certify that I was afflicted with granulated sore eyes for five years. After trying many skillful physicians, I went under Dr. Farley's treatment, of Bloomington. Was blind. He cured me in five weeks. Can see as well as the most of women of my age.

ELIZABETH RAGON,

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 1st, 1865.

I feel it my duty to make it known to the world that Dr. Farley, of Bloomington, can cure the worst kind of sore eyes. I was made blind by granulated lids. I was with three of the best oculists in Chicago, and grew worse under their treatment. I had given up ever seeing. I went to Dr. Farley, and was cured in about three months. Can see to read.

P. SHAFER.

EMINENCE, LOGAN Co., Ill.

This is to certify that my daughter, aged ten years, has been afflicted with scrofula sore eyes for more than five years, after trying several physicians she became totally blind. I had given up all hopes of her ever having the use of her eyes, but as luck would have it, I placed her under Dr. Farley's treatment, of Bloomington, he cured her in about six months. She can see to read the finest print, and to Dr. Farley I ascribe the praise.

ELIZA T. EWING.

DRY GROVE, MCLEAN Co., Ill.

This is to certify that Dr. Farley cured me of granulated sore eyes of four years standing; I would, therefore, cheerfully recommend Dr. Farley, of Bloomington, to all who are afflicted with sore eyes, sincerely believing, that if help can be found anywhere, it will be through him.
